

Advocates want #MeToo debate to include immigrant detention

By NOMAAN MERCHANT

HOUSTON — While she waits at a detention center in Texas to find out if she can stay in the United States, Laura Monterrosa fears that she put herself in danger by coming forward about sexual abuse.

Months after accusing a female guard at the facility of groping her and suggesting they have sex, Monterrosa says she still sees the guard in the dining hall and other parts of the facility. She recalled in a recent interview what the guard had said to her.

"I told her that I was going to tell the supervisor what was happening," Monterrosa said in a recent phone interview from the facility. "She sarcastically said, 'Do you think they'll believe you or me?'"

As the national discussion of sexual misconduct grows, advocates for immigrants say they hope the conversation will include immigrant detention facilities. They point to the FBI announcing in December that it had opened a civil rights investigation into Monterrosa's case as a positive sign.

"Our immigrant prison system thrives on secrecy," said Christina Fialho, co-executive director of Community Initiatives for Visiting Immigrants in Confinement, or CIVIC. "If more people knew what was truly happening behind locked doors, I think there would be an outcry against the immigrant detention system."

Fialho's organization sent a complaint to the U.S. Department of Homeland Security in April that listed 27 allegations of sexual abuse in immigration detention over the last three years. The complaint also says that another 1,016 people reported sexual abuse in detention to the Department of Homeland Security between May 2014 and July 2016.

Fialho said many more cases go uncounted because victims are afraid to come forward or, when they do, their cases aren't fully investigated. Based on CIVIC's analysis of federal data released through a Freedom of Information Act request, DHS investigated less than 3 percent of the sexual abuse complaints it received during that same time period.

Like many of the roughly 35,000 adults in immigration detention, Monterrosa, 23, has requested asylum. She arrived at the southern U.S. border in May after fleeing El Salvador, where she says she was forced into prostitution by her family and that an uncle raped her. The uncle was a policeman, she said.

If her asylum claim is denied, she could be deported. She is currently appealing a denial of her claim in October.

The Associated Press typically does not name victims in sexual assault investigations, but Monterrosa has come forward to encourage other women to report their stories.

OBITUARIES

Mary Jean Kettelkamp

Astoria

Nov. 24, 1931 — Dec. 12, 2017

Mary Jean Kettelkamp passed away Dec. 12, 2017, in Astoria, Oregon, surrounded by her three daughters. Mary was born Nov. 24, 1931, in Colfax, Washington, to James Oscar Hubbard and Faith Fasset Hubbard. She was always proud that she grew up in "Palouse Country" and Pullman, Washington. She subscribed to the local newspaper, The Pullman Herald, for many years to keep up with the local happenings in her beloved hometown.

Mary Jean Kettelkamp

After graduating from Pullman High School in 1949, Mary enrolled at Washington State University. While at Washington State, she was a member of the Delta Delta Delta sorority. Mary graduated with a bachelor's degree in pharmacy in the class of 1953, and was a lifelong Cougar fan.

Ready to leave Pullman and stretch her wings, Mary moved to Portland, Oregon, and started a job as a pharmacist at Emanuel Hospital. It was at Emanuel she met a handsome and kind young doctor named Richard (Dick) Kettelkamp.

After Dick finished his intern year, he returned to Iowa to practice medicine with his father. Letters traveled back and forth between Mary and Dick before he proposed to her. They were married on June 7, 1958, in Portland. Their next stop was Gunter Air Force Base in Montgomery, Alabama, while Dick was attending Officer Training School. Then it was off to Whiteman Air Force Base in Missouri.

The biggest blessing when they lived at Whiteman Air Force Base was the arrival of the first of their three daughters, Nancy Sue. It was still during the time that expectant fathers weren't allowed in the delivery room, so to pass the time Dick was in the adjoining delivery room delivering another baby.

While in Missouri, Mary was involved in Whiteman's Officers' Wives' Club and the local Methodist church. Dick's hometown of Monona, Iowa, was their next stop, where they lived for a year before making their final move to Astoria, Oregon, which would be her home for the next 56 years. Mary and Dick's next two daughters, Kathryn Elayne and Ann Marie, were born soon after.

Mary became very involved her new community, as she chose to stay home to raise their three girls. Over the years she was a Sunday school teacher, a 4-H leader, a Brownie and Girl Scout leader, hosted exchange students, served as a room mother in the classroom, and was like a second mom to many of her girls' friends. Her home was always open to these friends, and many of them continued to stop by to see Mary and Dick as adults when they'd return to Astoria for visits.

Mary also belonged to American Association of University Women and PEO, where she helped raise funds for college scholarships for young women. She was also a member of the Lower Columbia Danish Society and the Methodist Church.

Mary's hobbies included reading, genealogy, walking, listening to classical music and spending time with her many friends and family. Mary was known as a kind and thoughtful woman who was always willing to help others.

Mary was preceded in death by her husband, her parents and her older sister, Hope Elayne Briggs.

She is survived by her three daughters, Nancy (Mike) Kerlee of Chandler, Arizona, Kathryn (Jeff) Carlson of Astoria, Oregon, and Ann (Tom) Conway of Lemont, Illinois; her brother, Jack (Becky) Hubbard of Clarkston, Washington; and her six beloved granddaughters, Sydney and Emily Carlson, Jessica Kerlee, and Hope, Evie and Lucy Conway. She also leaves behind numerous nieces, nephews and dear friends.

Never wanting to be the center of attention, the always humble Mary requested that there be no memorial service, so a private family interment will be held later.

The family wants to thank the staff at Clatsop Retirement Center for their excellent care over the last few years, as well as the staff at Columbia Memorial Hospital for their exceptional care during her final days.

Memorial gifts can be made to Bethany Lutheran Church, 451 34th St., Astoria, OR 97103; First United Methodist Church, 1076 Franklin Ave., Astoria, OR 97103; or Clatsop Retirement Village, 947 Olney Ave., Astoria, OR 97103.

Lewis and Clark group to hold annual meeting on North Coast

The Daily Astorian

The Lewis and Clark Trail Heritage Foundation will hold its 50th-annual meeting on the North Coast in October.

Every year, the foundation selects a trail location for a gathering of approximately 150 enthusiasts from around the country who research and interpret the saga of the Corps of Discovery. The 50th national meeting is titled "Arrival at the Pacific: Object Achieved."

The event will include workshops, site visits, living history and other activities at Fort Clatsop, Middle Village Station Camp, Cape Disappointment State Park, Ecola State Park, Whale Park and Les Shirley Park in Cannon Beach and Salt Works in Seaside. The conference will also include a cruise on the Columbia River aboard the Portland Spirit.

The event is Oct. 7 to 10. For more information, visit tinyurl.com/yajyfrvx

Public comment sought on Jewell wildlife plan

The Daily Astorian

The Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife is seeking public comment on a newly updated management plan for the Jewell Meadows Wildlife Area.

The plan was last updated in 2007. No major changes are proposed, said Bryan Swearingen, wildlife area manager, though there are some changes to management strategies based on completed projects.

Wildlife area staff will host an open house to answer questions about the plan on Jan. 17 from 4 to 7 p.m. at the Jewell School Library.

The wildlife area — 1,114 acres owned and managed by the state — is located near U.S. Highway 26 and State Highway 202. It is home to Roosevelt elk, black-tailed deer, beaver, over 100 bird species, and many other species of animals, plants and trees.
