For Tyler and Amy Galloway, the loft at the Red Building in Astoria was the perfect place to be married. “We both fell in love with the loft as soon as we walked in,” said Amy. They enjoyed the Columbia River view from all of the windows, and they liked the loft’s ambiance with its open beams.

Although they live in St. Helens, planning the wedding was “pretty easy,” Tyler said. “We did it all over the phone or by email,” he added.

Amy traveled to Astoria to attend a bridal fair and returned later to talk to local vendors and visit the loft.

Silver Salmon Grille catered. Astoria area photographer Jaime Kae Hazen took the wedding photos. Brown Butter Bakery in Scappoose supplied the cake.

About 100 family members and friends attended the Sept. 16, 2017 wedding, which occurred on a partly cloudy day that still had lots of sunshine.

Amy wore a long champagne-colored dress covered in bead work. Tyler wore a dark gray suit with a “blush” tie to match Amy’s dress. The ceremony was officiated by the Rev. B.J. Pinkerton, and Amy’s daughter was the flower girl.

“She was very, very cute,” Amy said.

The biggest problem the couple had was finding a date when hotel rooms were available for their guests. >>
