Megan Kelly counted to 100 as she waited alone in a room at The Stephanie Inn. Out the window, the evening summer sun was fading over the waves as an intimate wedding party gathered on a small bluff overlooking the beach. She watched as fiancée Adam Freitas walked out first in a dark grey suit and a champagne tie. “I got to peek out and see him. Walking out and seeing his face—that was probably the most memorable moment for me.”

Adam echoed the sentiment with his own version of that same memorable moment he watched Megan approach him in her wedding dress: “the look in her eyes said she wanted to run up to me in excitement, but she had to compose herself and take her time. She looked so beautiful walking through the beach grass—it’s definitely the moment that stands out in my mind.”

On July 1st, 2017 Megan and Adam tied the knot in an intimate sunset wedding outside the Stephanie Inn in Cannon Beach. Megan chose lavender roses and wore a champagne colored dress she had picked out from a shop near her hometown in California. “It’s probably one of the prettiest wedding dresses in the world. It’s vintage style with beading down the back. I would wear it everyday if I could,” she laughed. Megan’s bridesmaids wore dusty rose lavender. >>
