

A fire displaced a resident and his dog in Seaside.

Fire at Seaside home forces brief evacuations

The Daily Astorian

Smoke billowed from the corner of a single-family Seaside home Thursday afternoon shortly after a man and his dog left the residence.

The fire at 412 N. Holladay Drive was reported by a passing driver shortly before 2:30 p.m., according to a release from the Seaside Fire Department. Nearby residents were evacuated, but fire personnel extinguished the fire before it could cause major damage to the home or spread to other houses in the area.

The cause of the fire is being investigated, but it does not appear to be suspicious, according to the release.

Seaside arcade brings Coney Island to Broadway

SEASIDE — A blast from the past — that's one way to describe the new Seaside Shootout, an arcade at 111 Broadway.

Choose your favorite gun — revolver, mare's leg or rifle — and take aim.

Take 24 shots in one game or fire unlimited shots for one minute. One game is $3; two games, $5; and five games $10.

Owners Dave and Britnie Posalski, with Solomon and Cecilia "CC" Sibony, opened the gallery in late January with a ribbon-cutting before members of the Seaside Chamber of Commerce.

The shooting gallery boasts city colors, as selected and designed by the city's visitors bureau. "They gave us a guide that had all of their colors and logos and icons, and they said we can run with it," Posalski said.

The Seaside Shootout is meant to be reminiscent of arcade games from Coney Island, New York, Posalski said.

Production of the machines was done by a company based in Paso Robles, California.

The store is described as "self-running," though Sibony will be next door at Freedom, the store he has owned since 2001.

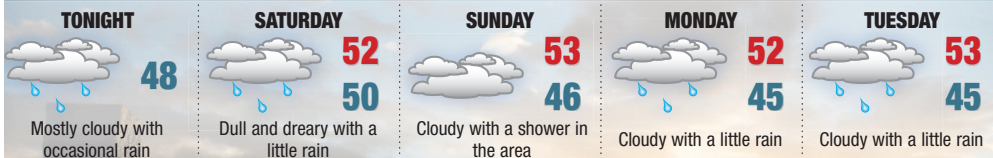

"I'm excited for something else for people to do in town, keeping people here, keeping people active," Seaside Chamber of Commerce Executive Director Brian Owen said.

Step right up and choose your game at Seaside Shootout.

Company claims the rejection of oil-by-rail is 'anti-development'

Associated Press

VANCOUVER, Wash. — The joint venture that wanted to build what would have been the nation's largest oil-by-rail terminal says Washington Gov. Jay Inslee's rejection of a permit "sends a clear anti-development message."

The Vancouver Energy project, a venture of Savage

Companies and Andeavor, formerly known as Tesoro Corp., proposed to receive about 360,000 barrels of North American crude oil a day by trains at the port of Vancouver along the Columbia River.

Inslee, in rejecting the permit Monday, said the risks and impacts outweighed the need for and potential benefits of the project. Inslee agreed with the recommendation of a state energy panel, which unanimously voted in November to recommend that the project be denied.

Vancouver Energy said the final environmental impact statement showed the project wouldn't have any significant impacts that couldn't be mitigated. It said it's evaluating its options.
