Barbecue returns to Astoria's Pier 11

Barbecue has returned to Pier 11 Mall in Astoria. Phil Spencer and Mark Winheim have opened Smoked Bones BBQ in the space formerly occupied by Bruce McBride's barbecue restaurant Rollin' Thunder from 2006 until its closure in December. Spencer, the self-described pit and sauce boss of Smoked Bones, previously worked at Baked Alaska and had been planning a butcher shop. Growing up going to barbecues gave him an affinity for the classic pit-style barbecue that he wanted to share with Astoria, he said. The barbecue, from ribs and brisket to chicken, is dry rubbed and slow-smoked. The meats come with comfort food staples like collard greens, coleslaw, mac salad, black-eyed peas and corn biscuits. The sauces trot the globe, from the Deep South to Vietnam, and the Scoville scale from mild to Spencer's "pain" sauce made with smoked habaneros, carrots and vinegar.

"Basically, any barbecue sauce from around the world, we're going to have it," Spencer said. Smoked Bones will eventually do special whole-animal barbecues and private catering. Winheim said the duo were tipped off by next-door neighbor Rich Ewing, owner of the Inferno Lounge, about the space opening up. The pier, a former grain elevator transformed into a minimal in the late 1970s by entrepreneurs George Brugh and Darrell Davis, has played host to a rotating cast of restaurants, now including Smoked Bones, the Inferno Lounge and Ewing's Pier 11 Pizza. Along with food service provider Sysco and Fort George Brewery, Winheim previously worked for former Pier 11 eatery Cecil's Trolley Stop Grill. Brugh sold the property in 2014 to Stephen and Karen Allen, co-owners of nearby Astoria Brewing Co. The Allens and their children have fixed up suites and added a collection of antique dealers to the building's central walkway. "Those two have really breathed life into the entire property," Winheim said of the Allens.

Verizon proposes new fiber optic line in Warrenton

The Daily Astorian

WARRENTON — The Department of State Lands is seeking public comment on a plan by Verizon to install fiber optic cable from Warrenton High School to the Warrenton Marina.

"Growing public demand for the use of wireless devices which require fast download speeds and broad bandwidth creates the need to install new fiber optic cable between existing communication towers," a project description from Verizon said.

Verizon proposes to run cable from near the intersection of Columbia Beach Lane and state Highway 104 to a tower behind the high school. The line would continue along existing utility poles along Highway 104 and cross the Skipanon River upstream from the Harbor Drive bridge and to a tower northeast of the marina on existing utility poles.

Comments are due by 5 p.m. March 16. View the application and make comments online at tinyurl.com/Verizonfiberline

Democrats propose amendments to Constitution on health care, housing

Associated Press

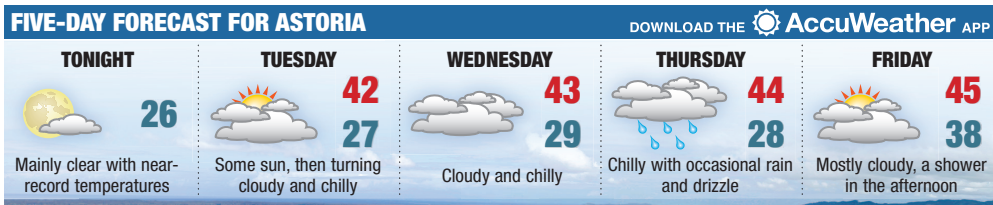

SALEM — Democratic legislators are considering a plan to subvert traditional election laws so they can handcraft ballot language for two proposed amendments to the Oregon Constitution.

The Oregonian reported the first proposed 2018 constitutional amendment would declare access to affordable health care a right in Oregon. The second would allow cities to issue bonds to finance affordable housing projects.

Under state law, the attorney general is supposed to write neutral ballot language for proposed constitutional amendments. Not so under Democrats' new plan.

Democrats would be allowed to form a legislative committee of four Democrats and two Republicans to write the ballot materials, according to draft language obtained by The Oregonian. That committee's language could still be appealed by any voter to the Oregon Supreme Court, which could order rewrites.
