House 'riddled with bullets' during home-invasion robbery in Nemah

Chinook Observer

NEMAH, Wash. — A man and woman are being sought following an especially violent home-invasion robbery in the Nemah area of U.S. Highway 101 early Saturday morning that resulted in a residence being shot up and three residents left handcuffed at the scene.

Pacific County Sheriff Scott Johnson said the suspects are considered armed and dangerous. They are believed to have fled south into Oregon. The incident started between 4 a.m. and 5 a.m. Saturday in the vicinity of the 5000 block of U.S. Highway 101, a wooded rural area near the South Nemah River and the east side of Willapa Bay.

The suspects shot through the doors, shot out many of the windows, and the whole house was "riddled with bullets," Johnson said. Weapons used in the home invasion included a pistol, a shotgun and rifle — "maybe an AK-style" weapon. There could have been more than one of each, the sheriff said.

Once the suspects gained access to the interior of the house, they handcuffed the one male and two female residents, and proceeded to ransack the dwelling. They took rifles and a "significant amount of valuables," the sheriff said. None of the victims was injured, which the sheriff said was surprisingly fortunate considering the number of rounds fired by the invaders.

The assailants' vehicle was described by one of the victims as a dark-colored hatchback with Oregon plates. A plate number was obtained and is believed to be associated with one of the suspects.

After the invaders left, one of the victims managed to get to a phone and dial 911 at 6:14 a.m. Saturday. Deputies from both south and north county responded and were on scene before 7 a.m. Washington State Patrol provided assistance.

The assailants are being sought on an array of charges, initially including first-degree robbery, first-degree burglary, unlawful imprisonment, theft of firearms, second-degree assault and second-degree theft.

Trump links tariff relief for Canada, Mexico to NAFTA talks

WASHINGTON — President Donald Trump said today that North American neighbors Canada and Mexico will get no relief from his new tariffs on steel and aluminum imports unless a "new and fair" free trade agreement is signed.

The Trump administration says the tariffs are necessary to preserve the American industries — and that doing so is a national security imperative. But Trump's latest tweets suggest he's also using the upcoming tariffs as leverage in ongoing talks to revise the North American Free Trade Agreement. The latest round of a nearly year-long renegotiation effort is concluding this week in Mexico City.

The tariffs will be made official in the next two weeks, White House officials said today, as the administration defended the protectionist decision from critics in Washington and overseas.

Trump's pronouncement last week that he would impose tariffs on imported steel and aluminum, roiled markets and raked allies.

The across-the-board action breaks with the recommendation of the Pentagon, which pushed for more targeted tariffs on metals imports from countries like China and warned that a wide-ranging move would jeopardize national security partnerships.

Trump has threatened to tax European cars if the EU boosts tariffs on American products in response to the president's plan to increase duties on steel and aluminum.

British Prime Minister Theresa May raised her "deep concern" at the tariff announcement in a phone call with Trump Sunday. May's office says she noted that multilateral action was the only way to resolve the problem of global overcapacity.

Push is on to restore power with a 2nd storm on the way

BOSTON — Power is slowly being restored in the hardest-hit areas of the East Coast, days after a destructive nor'easter downed trees and power lines, flooded coastal towns and forced a number of school districts to cancel classes — with another storm forecast for midweek.

Residents from Virginia to Massachusetts faced a massive cleanup today following the storm, which was blamed for nine deaths, including two children struck by trees. Utility crews worked around the clock to restore power to the affected areas, as nearly 300,000 struggled without electricity. At the height of the storm, more than 2 million homes and businesses were without electricity.

Three days after the storm, some residents were still unsure when they could return to their homes.

Even as the cleanup is underway, another storm is predicted to hit the region. But National Weather Service meteorologist Lenore Correia, in Taunton, Massachusetts, said last week's storm and this week's weather system aren't comparable.

"It's going to be completely different," Correia said. "There's going to be a lot more snow over a wider area."

The NWS said the Mid-Atlantic states will likely see some precipitation starting late Tuesday and continuing through Thursday. A winter storm watch has been issued for northern New Jersey and the Lehigh Valley and Pocono regions of Pennsylvania.

The storm pounded the Eastern Seaboard with a combination of gusting winds, rain and snow, and coastal communities were left to deal with damaging high tide flooding as powerful waves and churning surf pounded shorelines and beachfront homes.

GOP: Richardson was among the speakers

Smith's is one of a spectrum of opinions about the role of partisanship and the president at the conference, about eight months ahead of the November election, when state legislative races, congressional seats and the governor's seat will be up for grabs.

Meanwhile, the top Republican in statewide office urged attendees to identify as Oregonians before they identified as Republicans.

Oregon Secretary of State Dennis Richardson told conference attendees in a speech Saturday morning that their identity as Oregonians should come before their identity as Republicans if they wanted their party to win.

Richardson speaks from experience: In 2016, he was the first Republican to win statewide office since 2002, besting Democrat Brad Avakian, the state's labor commissioner.

"I would not be here unless I got Democratic votes, Green Party votes, Independent Party of Oregon votes, Working Family Party votes and votes from nonaffiliated Oregonians," Richardson said. "And why? Because they wanted to elect somebody who would keep his promise to do that which was best for our state. I said when I was elected you wouldn't be able to tell if there was an 'R' or a 'D' behind my name, and I hope that you can see that I've tried to live up to that."

Smith, the gubernatorial candidate, also argues that Republicans can win statewide elections by homing in on issues that voters in Portland care about, such as health care, education and homelessness.

State Rep. Knute Buehler, R-Bend, who is also jostling for the governor's mansion, also criticized focusing too much on the White House: He claimed in a speech that while he was solving local problems in the Legislature, Democratic Gov. Kate Brown was "fixated on divisive national politics."

The Saturday-night headliner was former Trump campaign adviser and self-styled provocateur Roger Stone, who gave a speech touting what he believes to be the accomplishments of the president and condemning Democrats.

He is a controversial figure who remains in the national limelight for his ties to Trump.

Stone has also lobbied on Trump's behalf on Capitol Hill and says he urged the New York real estate tycoon to run for president in 1988. Stone got his start in national politics working on Richard Nixon's Committee To Re-Elect The President.

Stone claimed Trump brought African-American employment to the lowest level on record, said the president is committed to free trade, and celebrated the contributions of alternative right-wing media outlets and social media to Trump's campaign.

"The rise of a vibrant, robust alternative media, the rise of social media, Twitter, Facebook and so on, is what allowed for the election of an outsider candidate who the mainstream media sought to destroy," Stone said.

Stone also warned of what he described as a "tech left" that he believes seeks to censor right-wing perspectives on social media platforms.

The Atlantic reported last week that Stone had corresponded directly with radical-transparency organization WikiLeaks, which is suspected to have ties to Russia, before the 2016 election. The magazine reported Stone had said under oath he'd corresponded with Wikileaks through an "intermediary."

Stone, who on Saturday dismissed what he called "the Russian collusion delusion," told the magazine he provided the full exchange to the House Intelligence Committee, which is investigating whether the Trump campaign coordinated with Russia to undermine Trump's Democratic opponent, Hillary Clinton.

The main speaker Friday, Fox News commentator, author and radio host Kevin Jackson, likewise praised the president and lambasted "leftists."

"What a world you people created on Nov. 8, 2016," Jackson said, referring to the day Trump was elected president, to applause. "I'll never forget the look on those sissies' faces."

He disparaged feminists, prioritized the rights of American citizens first and "human beings second," and criticized the study of the humanities and social justice in the nation's colleges.

"I'm done with feminists," he said.

The chairwoman of the Democratic Party of Oregon, Jeanne Atkins, said in a statement earlier this week that the choice of speakers for the conference was "appalling."

"Republicans are increasingly out of touch with voters and their promotion of speakers who are known for hate speech and public deceit is frightening," Atkins said.

Greg Astley, president of the conference, defended the choice of speakers such as Jackson and Stone and said that the Dorchester Conference was a "big tent."

The value of the conference, he said, was that Oregonians from across the state could interact face to face with prominent figures, recalling how, attending the conference at 14, he met former Gov. Vic Atiyeh.

If attendees disagreed with a speaker's views, they could go talk to them directly or ask questions, Astley said.

"If we shut down all that kind of conversation, I don't think we'll be any better than the progressive far left," Astley said.

businesses that shut down, from life preservers to the tools of cobblers.

"It was interesting how Astoria sort of has come and gone in waves," Vaughn said. "In 1911, Astoria was the second largest city in Oregon. A century later, it's certainly not anymore."

Vaughn is helping put together a show on natural resources in Clatsop County, a new permanent exhibit at the heritage museum. The exhibit will look at historic logging, fishing and farming, connecting to present-day business and the increased focus on tourism.

"We've done a good job preserving the past," she said.

"But what is considered the past is ever-evolving, so we are ... looking beyond the Flavels. What's happened elsewhere in this community? How can we have a more expansive and knowledgeable idea of our shared past?"
