

POINT of view

THE DAILY ASTORIAN // QUESTION OF THE WEEK

'Sen. Kim Thatcher is proposing a bill that would make daylight saving time permanent. What do you think?'

"I agree with it. I want it to happen. I'm tired of changing the clock back and forth."

David Starr, Astoria

"I've never objected to the shifting of the time. I'm used to it. It's almost a point of amusement. I understand there are economic reasons to get rid of it, but there are also compelling social reasons to keep it — like kids' bus schedules and walking to school in the morning."

Tom Barnum, Astoria

"I'm used to the change. It tells me I still have to do a few things to use my brain. Actually, it doesn't bother me one way or another. It's only one hour."

Duane Ballard, Astoria

William George and Bobette Eileen Frederick Jewell

Dec. 1, 1938 — Feb. 20, 2018

They are survived by two daughters, Linnae Warren (Lester) of Rover, Arkansas, and Cindy DeRouin (Darren) of Forest Grove, Oregon; Bobbi's two brothers, Joe Moore (Shannon) of Snohomish, Washington, and Adrian Moore (Sue) of Anacortes, Washington; four grandchildren, Dustin, Christian, Aaron and Amy; two great-grandchildren, Sean and Jesse; as well as numerous nieces and nephews.

Joanne Posey Lebanon

Feb. 24, 1931 — March 10, 2018

Joanne Olive Posey was born Feb. 24, 1931, in Portland, Oregon, to Arne and Francis Oja. Joanne spent her younger years with her family in the Bonney Slope area. In the 1940s, Joanne graduated from Knappa High School, and soon after she worked for the Knappa Telephone Co., where as an operator she connected many of the local calls. Then she met a man from Houghton Lake, Michigan, on his way to Alaska with homesteading papers for the Matuska Valley, but she foiled that plan. Lester L. Posey never made it there. He started courting Joanne in the upper Brownsmead area, and they were soon married on Nov. 6, 1951.

Sharon was their first child to come along, then followed by Mike, Tom, Kay and Ross. Joanne was known as the community babysitter. In addition to babysitting, she was also a homemaker and loved gardening, annual family campouts and clam digging.

Joanne is survived by her brother, Richard Oja; and her five children, Sharon Rabie (Don) of Portland, Mike Posey (Sheri) of Svensen, Tom Posey (Anona) of Portland, Kay Walker (Jeff) of Lebanon, and Ross Posey (Judy) of Battle Ground, Washington; 12 grandchildren; nine great-grandchildren; and lots of nieces and nephews.

Joanne was preceded in death by her husband, Lester, in 1995; her brother, Donald; her parents, Arne and Francis Oja; and two sisters, Vivian Engblom (Dunsmoor) and Carol Barendse.

Viewing will be held at Caldwell's Mortuary in Astoria on Friday, March 16, from 1 to 5 p.m.

Services will be held at the old Immanuel Lutheran Church in Knappa on Saturday, March 17, at 1 p.m., with a reception following.

Memorial donations may be made to Samaritan Evergreen Hospice, 4600 Evergreen Place S.E., Albany, OR 97322; the Svensen Senior Center; or the Svensen-Wickiup Grange.

Warrenton seeks new city planner

The Daily Astorian

A former Astoria community development director will be filling in as Warrenton's city planner after the current planner retires Thursday.

Skip Urling has been city planner for Warrenton for nearly seven years, overseeing many large developments both commercial and residential. His retirement announcement had been anticipated.

Urling thanked city commissioners Tuesday night for the opportunity to work in Warrenton. He wished the city "continued good luck." He told them he already has a summer job lined up: He plans to work as head chef for a fishing camp in Alaska. He has said he will likely continue to do some planning work in the private sector.

Kevin Cronin, who left his position as Astoria's community development director last fall, will take over Urling's duties on an interim basis. City Manager Linda Engbretson hopes to have a new city planner in place by the end of May.

The new planner will be coming on board at a time when Warrenton is growing rapidly and large residential projects continue to come across the planner's desk. The City Commission hopes to begin reworking the city's comprehensive and development plans, updating them to reflect the city's changing needs and desires — work the new planner will take on, Engbretson said. She hopes Cronin can get the building and planning department started on streamlining processes in order to meet new demands on the department's time and resources.
