

A HEADY BREW

Ninth annual Pouring at the Coast — held March 17 at the Seaside Civic & Convention Center — is a beer lover's craft beer festival

By HEATHER DOUGLAS
FOR COAST WEEKEND

The landscape of Seaside's mainstay beer-tasting event, Pouring at the Coast, has evolved since its humble beginnings, which featured only a handful of craft breweries eight years ago when it first began. These days, guests can sample upwards of 80 different craft beers.

The ninth annual Pouring will take place at the Seaside Civic & Convention Center 3 to 8 p.m. Saturday March 17. Attendees 21 and over can expect to taste craft beers from more than 30 breweries along the coast and throughout the Pacific Northwest, while enjoying live music from Hawaiian-themed headliners Sons of Aloha. Concession-style pub fare will be on hand.

The coastal beer scene has exploded over the past decade, and Jimmy Griffin, the event organizer and owner of Seaside Brewing Co., said it hasn't played out.

Attendees get to keep their Pouring at the Coast commemorative glass.
COURTESY SEASIDE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

