

New coffee, bakery, to-go store opens along Sunset Lake

Couple plan full opening on May 1

A new coffee shop, bakery, to-go restaurant and convenience store is opening on the approach to Sunset Beach.

Mindy Garrison and Stephen Hollenbeck held a soft opening over the weekend of Cullaby Coffee at the corner of Sunset Beach Lane and Lewis Road, near the main crossing of Sunset Lake. Theirs is the first business in the building since Bakery and Deli by the Sea, run by Dona Bennett and Dorothy Borovac until about a decade ago.

are opening Cullaby Coffee from 8 a.m. to noon Saturday and Sunday while the two work other full-time jobs, gather a staff and finish setting up the to-go breakfast and lunch operation and convenience store. They plan to open in full May 1.

“We’ve got two gated communities and all the beach traffic, so that’s really the area we’re shooting for,” Garrison said.

The shop is also gathering customers from nearby bus traffic, too, Hollenbeck said. Cullaby Coffee sits kitty-corner from the Sunset Lake Resort & RV Park and across Lewis Road from a lakeside park.

Garrison, an early interventionist at Seaside Heights Elementary School, moved to Oregon a few years ago from Moses Lake, Washington. Her aunt and uncle own the building and had been planning their own restaurant but still live and raise cattle in eastern Washington, Garrison said. For the past couple of years, she has been planning her own operation, intending to purchase the building from her family.

“It was just me and my teenage daughter before I met Steve,” Garrison said. “So, it’s exciting. It’s a new opportunity. I won’t leave education just yet, but this is supposed to be our retirement project.”

Garrison met Hollenbeck while working at Auto Zone in Warrenton. Hollenbeck grew up in Astoria and had his first bakery experience in the former Danish Maid Bakery as a teenager. He spent 25 years as an auto body technician in Portland before recently moving back.

The two formed Cullaby Coffee in November and began organizing the business. They soon learned the building, located just off the roadway, could not accommodate seating without at least 16 off-street parking spaces, relegating them to a strictly to-go business.

Along with the main convenience store, they are planning a walk-up window where people can order items such as breakfast burritos in the morning and sandwiches in the afternoon.

The shop will include about five varieties of breakfast burritos in the morning, with a broad selection of hot sauces, and sandwiches in the afternoon, Hollenbeck said. The shop bakes its own pastries and sources coffee from multiple roasters.

Open for only two days so far with minimal signage, Garrison and Hollenbeck have already noticed a trickle of locals coming into the coffee shop.

“The old guys are wondering when they can come in and hang out,” Garrison said with a laugh. “It’s pretty cool.”

Washington initiative aims to ban soda taxes

Associated Press

OLYMPIA, Wash. — A group backed by the soda industry is seeking to bar cities and counties in Washington state from imposing their own taxes on sodas or other sweetened beverages through a proposed statewide initiative. The political committee, Yes! To Affordable Groceries, has submitted language for a proposed statewide initiative, The Daily Herald reported on Sunday.

They’ll need to collect and turn in signatures from 259,622 registered voters by July 6 to qualify the measure for the November ballot.

The group’s financial muscle comes from the American Beverage Association, with key donors including The Coca-Cola Co. and PepsiCo Inc., Dr Pepper Snapple Group Inc. and Red Bull North America Inc.

OBITUARIES

Andrew Benjamin Newell Clatskanie

June 5, 1990 — March 4, 2018

Andrew Benjamin Newell was born on June 5, 1990. He was raised in Astoria, Oregon, where he lived most of his life. He passed away at the age of 27.

Andrew was a Doernbecher child, and had overcome many medical challenges. He went on to prove himself, and live an ordinary, typical lifestyle. He beat many obstacles, but this time we were not so fortunate.

Andrew was also sponsored by a Shriner, and received medical attention at Shriners Hospital in Portland, Oregon.

Andrew helped in many fundraisers for the Fishermen’s Benefit Fund/Lighthouse Park project. He volunteered at many fundraisers, which benefited many fishermen’s families in times of distress.

He enjoyed helping his father with boat work, delivering the catch, and socializing with fishermen. Andrew very much enjoyed being a boat puller on any boat his father skippered. Gillnetting on Youngs Bay on the Miss Cindi was Andy’s favorite, besides going out on grandpa’s boat.

He was very well known in the fishing community, and liked by many. Always ready and willing to work as long as needed, he enjoyed lending a helping hand, and was always there to give advice.

Andrew was a member of the Special Olympics team out of St. Helens, Oregon. He participated in all of the sporting events, but especially enjoyed bocce ball, which he was very good at. He received many medals throughout his time.

Andrew loved to play bingo on Friday nights at the Moose Lodge. You don’t dare change plans, because he was meeting grandma and grandpa and Uncle Doug to win their money from them.

Andrew moved to a group home, Orchard House, in Clatskanie, Oregon, where he passed away due to health complications.

Andrew is survived by his mother, Cynthia “Cindi” Newell; a brother, Daniel Newell; a sister, Lori Kinter; grandparents, Richard and Jean Quashnick; uncles, Rick Quashnick, David (Kari) Quashnick and Doug Quashnick; aunts, Suzi (Doug) Heater, Patsy Verhouven and Sue Drake; and friend, Ricky Sutton.

He was preceded in death by his father, Richard Stanley “Rick” Newell, in 2007; an aunt, Donna Quashnick; and grandparents, Stanley and Betty Newell.

A celebration of life is being held at 4 p.m. Saturday, March 24, at the Astoria Moose Lodge, 4220 17th St.

They told us Andrew would be limited, but to us that meant there was no limit.

Everyone who knew Andrew would enjoy and love him. He would always leave a special place in your heart.
