'Meet the Councilor' event with Jones set

The Daily Astorian

Astoria City Councilor Bruce Jones will hold a "Meet the Councilor" event Saturday at 10 a.m. at Alderbrook Hall on the corner of 45th Street and Lief Erikson Drive.

Jones said he is "long overdue" to meet with constituents in this kind of informal setting. The City Council recently approved taking steps toward selling Birch Field, a ballpark in Alderbrook. The potential sale of this land concerns some Alderbrook residents and it is a topic Jones expects to address at the meeting. Residents will have an opportunity to bring questions and discuss other issues as well. Jones' ward covers east Astoria.

Co. Their business grew until it was necessary to move to a larger facility in Kent. Fred passed his expertise onto his sons, who all spent time working at Reliable Machine until the business was sold in 1983. His sons continue to work in the trade to this day. Fred liked spending time outdoors with his family, hiking to alpine lakes in Washington's Cascade Mountains, fishing streams and lakes all over the state, and razor clam digging on the beaches of the Pacific Northwest. He also enjoyed playing the guitar.

Kitzhaber agrees to settle ethics case for $20K

By PARIS ACHEN
Capital Bureau

Former Gov. John Kitzhaber has agreed to settle a state ethics case against him for $20,000.

commission voted to pursue 10 alleged violations of state ethics law by Kitzhaber.

The "preliminary findings of violation" were based on a 135-page report released in February by state investigators.

the governor's residence in Salem with Kitzhaber, and her payments from clients were counted as part of the couple's household income in mandatory statements of economic interest.

"The commission made no finding that former Governor Kitzhaber intentionally used his position as governor to advance the financial interests of Ms. Hayes or 3E Strategies," states the proposed stipulated final order, released Wednesday. "Such intent is not a necessary element."

The proposed agreement between the Oregon Ethics Commission and the former governor who resigned in February 2015 amid an influence-peddling scandal is 20 times more than a previous proposed settlement, which the commission rejected.

Kitzhaber violated law prohibiting use of his office for personal financial gain at least twice when he took actions that benefited his fiancée, Sylvia Hayes's environmental consulting firm, 3E Strategies, investigators wrote in the report. Hayes lived in
