

Astoria still seeking community development director applicants

By KATIE FRANKOWICZ
The Daily Astorian

Astoria has gone nearly seven months without a full-time community development director.

City Manager Brett Estes had hoped to have someone in the position this spring. Two candidates traveled to Astoria in February for interviews and also attended a public meet-and-greet, but the city ultimately decided to reopen the search and see who else might apply.

Now, a job posting for the position is back up on the city's website. The salary is advertised at $83,514 to $101,512 a year and applications will be accepted through the end of the month. Estes hopes to get someone in place by July.

The position has been vacant since former director Kevin Cronin left in October. He works as a consultant in the area and has done work for the Port of Astoria. He is also acting as Warrenton's interim planning director — a position he took on after former director Skip Urling retired in March.

Warrenton City Manager Linda Engbretson plans to interview three candidates for the job soon and hopes to fill the position by mid-June. Two of the candidates already live in Clatsop County. Cronin has not expressed interest in the job.

In Astoria, Estes has filled in as interim community development director and brought on former city planner and former Cannon Beach mayor Mike Morgan as interim senior planner. Another former city planner, Rosemary Johnson, is working as a consultant on various community development projects. The city has also utilized services available through an agreement with the Columbia River Estuary Study Taskforce.

The costs of supplementing the department through these other measures while the city looks for a new director remain well below what Astoria would be paying if the position had already been filled, Finance Director Susan Brooks noted.

Coast Guard rescues capsized kayaker from Willapa Bay

The Daily Astorian

An overturned kayaker was rescued Sunday in Willapa Bay.

The kayaker used a cell-phone to call 911 just before 5 p.m. The Coast Guard and a Pacific County beach rescue team responded.

The Coast Guard used an

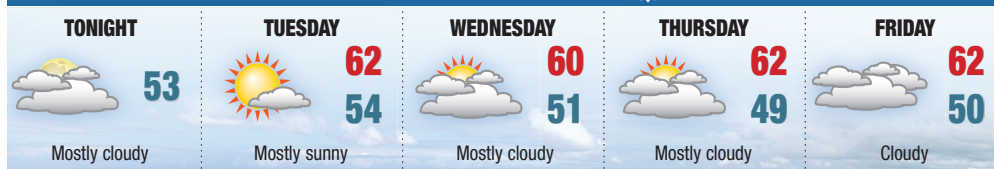

MH-60 Jayhawk helicopter from Sector Columbia River and a 47-foot lifeboat from Station Grays Harbor to search the area. Crew members in the helicopter recommended a water evacuation.

A boater on a personal watercraft then assisted the kayaker to shore.

The Coast Guard reminds all those who take to the water to be prepared for any possible emergencies similar to this one. Carrying a communication device like a cell-phone or a handheld radio is always recommended. Also recommended is staying with your paddle craft and dressing for water temperature, not air temperature.
