Osborne is the artist-in-residence at Catherine Bede Gallery, and art instructor and art curator at the RoseSprings Gallery. "My art reflects roots in the Pacific Northwest. I believe art is healing; it should make you feel something; perhaps a transition from one emotion completing or changing to another emotion altogether. Painting takes me on a journey or recollection, a dream or memory," Osborne said.

Rimerman served as the Open Show director at the Lake Oswego Festival of the Arts for 25 years, director of the Rain Spark Gallery, and visual arts director of the Lakewood Center. As an arts educator for 33 years, she pioneered the Art After Hours program for high school students and community members.

"Everyone connects with their own experiences, whether from their childhood, recent memories or perhaps where they would like to be in the future," Rimerman said.

Martin grew up on three continents, earned an MBA, is a certified creativity coach and teaches art classes. She is a guild member of the Arts Council Lake Oswego. Her work is contemporary in style and leans toward the abstract and sometimes surreal.

Plus at the gallery: artist lectures, a Painting Seaside LIVE™ demonstration by Carolyn Macpherson and music by Shirley 88.
