Fisherman missing near Clatsop Spit

By JACK HEFFERNAN
The Daily Astorian

The Coast Guard has suspended its search for a man who was fishing from shore near Clatsop Spit on Tuesday.

The 53-year-old Scapoose man, who was wearing waders while fishing, texted his wife just before 10 p.m., Petty Officer 1st Class Levi Read said. She then fell asleep and reported him missing about 9 a.m. Wednesday after realizing he had not come home.

The Coast Guard has not publicly identified the man.

Crews from Station Cape Disappointment and Sector Columbia River spent nearly 24 hours in the area with a 47-foot motor lifeboat, a 29-foot vessel and a helicopter. The search was concentrated near the Columbia River side of the South Jetty, Read said.

“Our thoughts are with the family and friends of the missing man,” the Coast Guard wrote in a tweet.

Report: Oregon apartments unaffordable for average renter

Associated Press

PORTLAND — A new report says the average Oregon renter can no longer afford a one-bedroom apartment.

The National Low Income Housing Coalition’s “Out of Reach” report shows a renter would have to earn $36,161 a year to comfortably afford a typical one-bedroom rental in Oregon. The average renter household in the state makes $36,096.

The Oregonian reported the study uses fair-market rents, which are determined by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to set local values for housing vouchers. It considers housing to be affordable when it consumes less than 30 percent of a household’s income.

Though rising rents in Portland have garnered a lot of attention in recent years, the study shows there are only a few rural counties where the average one-bedroom apartment is affordable to a renter who works full-time earning the minimum wage.

Rare whale dolphin washes ashore

The Daily Astorian

MANZANITA — A rare female northern right whale dolphin washed ashore on Manzanita Beach on the Oregon Coast on Saturday, the Seaside Aquarium reported.

The animals tend to live much farther south and in deeper offshore waters, although they can range as far north as Alaska, Tiffany Boothe of the aquarium said.

The whale dolphin moves south during colder water temperature periods and north during warmer water periods.

Boothe said that aquarium staff have only seen four of these unique dolphins since 1995, when the aquarium became involved with the Northern Oregon/Southern Washington Marine Mammal Stranding Network.

The northern right whale dolphin is known to travel in groups of up to 2,000, although they are more often found in social groups of 200 or 300.

Tiffany Boothe/Seaside Aquarium

A female northern right whale dolphin washed ashore on Manzanita Beach.

The largest threat to these dolphins is from high-sea drift nets.

Drift nets are considered responsible for a 24 to 73 percent population decline. In Oregon and California, law requires fishing boats to use pinger devices that deliver acoustic warnings into the water column to reduce bycatch.

The dolphin beached in Manzanita was picked up by the Seaside Aquarium and transferred to Portland State University, where a necropsy was performed, Boothe said. Preliminary results from the necropsy were inconclusive.
