

Centers: 'It's a big facility, it's old, there's problems'

It isn't clear why Astoria Pointe closed, but Evans and Amy Baker, executive director of Clatsop Behavioral Healthcare, said it was a financial issue.

"It's a money thing," Evans said. "Treatment is expensive, especially in that field that they're in. It's a big facility, it's old, there's problems."

Sunspire Health maintains facilities across the country, including in California, Texas and Florida. The company's website doesn't outline the cost of seeking treatment at Astoria Pointe, but notes it accepted many major private health insurance providers.

Sunspire Health advertised Astoria Pointe as a restorative and calming location. "Being here is like a breath of fresh air, and it feels like a new chapter in life is starting," the website stated.

Astoria Pointe provided 40 beds, but most of these were occupied by people from out of town seeking treatment.

"For us one of the challenges with Astoria Pointe was people came from all over the country to get treatment there," Baker said. "If they relapsed or were kicked out of treatment, then often they would end up with us."

Helping Hands also saw former Astoria Pointe clients come through the door.

"So whatever happens with that facility, I hope there is some level of commitment to serve local folks," Baker said.

"Because it was hard to get a local bed," Evans added.

"It was impossible," Baker said.

Cemetery: City is 'still playing catch-up'

The cost of an adult burial will rise from $1,286 to $1,414. Chapel reservations will rise from $83 per hour to $91 per hour.

Maintenance of cemetery grounds has been a source of consternation for the past several years. Warrenton City Commissioner Mark Baldwin called the cemetery's condition "shameful" in July 2017, referencing graves that were overgrown with grass and weeds.

The Parks and Recreation Department has added a maintenance worker to help solve the problem.

"A part-time seasonal employee dedicated to the maintenance will help provide that beautification for maintenance out there while still keeping our costs relatively low," Cosby said.

However, the city is "still playing catch-up" at Ocean View, Cosby said.

Trump, Republicans to huddle as outrage builds over border policy

By DUSTIN WEAVER and ALAN FRAM
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Republicans on Capitol Hill frantically searched today for ways to end the administration's policy of separating families after illegal border crossings, ahead of a visit from President Donald Trump to discuss broader immigration legislation.

Top conservatives, including key Trump allies, announced they were introducing bills to stop the practice amid a public outcry over the administration's "zero tolerance" approach to illegal crossings.

Sen. Ted Cruz of Texas introduced legislation that the White House said it was reviewing, and Rep. Mark Meadows of North Carolina, a leader of the conservative Freedom Caucus, also introduced a measure.

Both bills were offered as alternatives in case broader GOP immigration legislation heading for a vote this week fails, as is likely. "This becomes a backup proposal," Meadows told reporters at the White House.

Trump's meeting late today with House Republicans comes as lawmakers in both parties are up in arms after days of news reports showing images of children being held at border facilities in cages and an audio recording of a young child pleading for his "Papa."

The issue boiled over today at a House hearing on an unrelated subject when protesters with babies briefly shut down proceedings.

'Papa! Papa!' Audio of children stokes rage over separation

Associated Press

BROWNSVILLE, Texas — An audio recording that appears to capture the heartbreaking voices of small Spanish-speaking children crying out for their parents at a U.S. immigration facility took center stage in the growing uproar over the Trump administration's policy of separating immigrant children from their parents.

"Papa! Papa!" one child is heard weeping in the audio file. Human rights attorney Jennifer Harbury said she received the tape from a whistleblower and it was recorded in the last week.

Homeland Security Secretary Kirstjen Nielsen said she had not heard the audio but said children taken into custody by the government are being treated humanely.

The audio surfaced as backlash over the policy widened. The Mormon church said it is "deeply troubled" by the separation of families at the border and urged national leaders to find compassionate solutions. Massachusetts Gov. Charlie Baker, a Republican, reversed a decision to send a National Guard helicopter from his state to the Mexican border to assist in a deployment, citing the administration's "cruel and inhumane" policy.

on the House Oversight and Government Reform Committee, teared up as he pleaded with Republicans on the panel to end what he called "internment camps."

"We need you, those children need you —and I am talking directly to my Republican colleagues—we need you to stand up to President Donald Trump," he said.

Under the current policy, all unlawful crossings are referred for prosecution — a process that moves adults to the custody of the U.S. Marshals Service and sends many children to facilities run by the Department of Health and Human Services. Under the Obama administration, such families were usually referred for civil deportation proceedings, not requiring separation.

Nearly 2,000 children were separated from their families over a six-week period in April and May.

The House is already embroiled in an election-year struggle over immigration legislation that threatens to hurt Republicans in November.

Democrats have seized on the family separation issue. And now, Republicans are increasingly joining them in their call to stop separating families.

"While cases are pending, families should stay together," tweeted Cruz, who is in an unexpectedly tough re-election battle. He introduced his own bill to speed up court proceedings to no more than 14 days. "Children belong with their families."

Michigan Republican Rep. Fred Upton called for an immediate end to the "ugly and inhumane practice" of separation. "It's never acceptable to use kids as bargaining chips in political process." Kansas GOP Sen. Pat Roberts said he was "against using parental separation as a deterrent to illegal immigration."

"The time is now for the White House to end the cruel, tragic separations of families," said Sen. Lisa Murkowski, R-Alaska.

From afar, ailing Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., tweeted, "The administration's current family separation policy is an affront to the decency of the American people and contrary to principles and values upon which our nation was founded. The administration has the power to rescind this policy. It should do so now."

The Trump administration insists the family separations are required under the law. But after signaling Monday that it would oppose any fix aimed solely at addressing that issue, the White House said Tuesday it was reviewing the emergency legislation being introduced by Cruz to keep migrant families together.

The senator's bill would add more federal immigration judges, authorize new temporary shelters to house migrant families, speed the processing of asylum cases and require that families that cross the border illegally be kept together, absent criminal conduct or threats to the welfare of any children.

Forests: 'I want to make sure we are not being penny-wise and pound-foolish'

That includes the projected cost of fire protection.

The land board approved that request to keep the lengthy budget process going, but the department will also look into alternatives over the summer, an effort that Brown and Read appeared to support.

"I would not presume to know what the results of that inquiry will reveal," Read said. "I think it will be important for this board to be able to consider that, but it seems to me we'd be in a stronger position with more information."

Brown, noting that previous state lands directors have likely considered other management options, said the idea was "worth revisiting," but expressed concern about funding for fire protection.

"I want to make sure we are not being penny-wise and pound-foolish," Brown said. "And that we are guaranteeing adequate protection to the extent that we can, given changing weather conditions and what we anticipate is going to be a very challenging fire season."

The process will likely get underway late this month or early next month. The department is expected to present its findings at a state land board meeting later this year.

The state lands department can terminate its contract with the state forestry department for Common School Fund land management with 90 days' notice.

The forestry department says that some of that increase would fund personnel to manage the Common School Fund forestland currently in its care.

When it comes to managing those forests, the Department of Forestry plans and administers timber sales, conducts surveys for threatened and endangered species, conducts forest inventory and manages reforestation and young forest stands.

Forestry officials also expect the Common School Fund land under their management to generate $6.7 million in timber sales revenue in the 2019-2021 biennium, resulting in about $1.9 million in net revenues to the Common School Fund.
