

THE DAILY ASTORIAN

146TH YEAR, NO. 7

DailyAstorian.com // TUESDAY, JULY 10, 2018

ONE DOLLAR

Seaside man gets sentenced in shooting

Scarborough receives more than 8 1/2 years

By JACK HEFFERNAN
The Daily Astorian

A Seaside man was sentenced Monday to more than 8 1/2 years in prison after a November clash at a hotel over drugs ended with a shooting.

Shaun Scarborough, 29, entered a man's room at the Beachside Inn in Seaside with his girlfriend, Marta Garfias, 21. Garfias had allegedly arranged to meet with Christopher Neaman, 36, of Washington state, to buy drugs.

Shaun Scarborough

Scarborough arrived with a .45-caliber pistol and a bandanna covering his face. During the encounter, Scarborough allegedly shot the man.

Scarborough said Monday that he went to the hotel with Garfias to confront Neaman about selling drugs to his homeless mother and that the gun misfired.

"I'll take responsibility for what my actions are, but it was more of an emotional disturbance," Scarborough said. "I used her to get in that door. It just got out of hand."

See SCARBOROUGH, Page 7A

Family settles claim over bridge death

Suicide sparked county mental health review

By DERRICK DePLEDGE
The Daily Astorian

The family of a woman who jumped off the Astoria Bridge in 2015 has settled a wrongful death claim against Clatsop Behavioral Healthcare over her mental health treatment.

The lawsuit alleged the mental health agency was negligent in caring for Carrie Barnhart, 54, who had a history of schizophrenia and depression.

The amount of the settlement is confidential.

Jeremiah Ross, a Portland attorney who represented Barnhart's family, declined to comment.

"CBH is grateful that we were able to work with the family to resolve the case," Amy Baker, the mental health agency's executive director, said in an email. "Our mission is to provide much-needed services to Clatsop County citizens with substance use and mental health disorders."

See SUICIDE, Page 7A

Photos by Colin Murphey/The Daily Astorian

TRAINING DAY

TOP: Law enforcement officers train Monday for an active shooter situation at Seaside High School. LEFT: Police officers practice entering an active shooter situation. MIDDLE: Volunteers play the role of an active shooter during a training exercise put on by the Clatsop County Sheriff's Office. RIGHT: Mock victims run past law enforcement during training at Seaside High School. BELOW: Police officers from Seaside and Warrenton practice entering a classroom during a training exercise.

Food carts provide food for thought in Seaside

R.J. Marx/The Daily Astorian

Seaside restaurant owners David Posalski, Jimmy Griffin, Doug Wiese and Wayne Poole in the second row at the City Council workshop on food carts.

Restaurant owners pan idea

By R.J. MARX
The Daily Astorian

SEASIDE — Let them eat cake — or tacos or fresh salads — whatever the creative chef can manage in a kitchen the size of a step van.

Fans and foes of food carts came to City Hall Monday for a workshop driven by residents who see an opportunity for diverse cuisine and a draw for visitors. Under city ordinances, all commercial businesses must operate within a permanent building, but food carts may be licensed on a short-term basis for charity and special events.

City Councilor Seth Morrisey, who moderated the workshop, said a food cart could lower the barrier to entry for entrepreneurs and give an opportunity to those who might not have the capital for a restaurant.

Seaside resident Matt Rose said he and his girlfriend love the idea. "They're more of an experience for us," he said.

Seaside Yoga's Kristin Kabanuk said food carts offer opportunities for young entrepreneurs and could provide more choices. "For me as a business owner, we have very few health and wellness related businesses and eateries in this town," she said. "It's very hard to find a really good salad, a healthy smoothie. I'd like to see more options than fish and chips and chowders."

Restaurant owners who attended the workshop largely opposed the prospect.

Doug Wiese of Dooger's Seafood said there are already 75 food service establishments in Seaside. "I would suggest to this body that the restaurant pool in the city is stretched

See SEASIDE, Page 5A

