THE DAILY ASTORIAN // QUESTION OF THE WEEK

Who do you think will win the World Cup?

"France, unfortunately. I saw the game today. I wish it was England, but England always fumbles the ball."

Edward James, Astoria

"Croatia."

Edna Right, Calhoun, Georgia

"I was really heavily invested in Mexico. So after they lost, I stopped paying attention."

William Hicks has received a $7,100 state grant to help remove the metal facade from the former Abeco Office Systems storefront on Commercial Street.

Local boat and building projects get state support

The Daily Astorian

Two local projects have received funding through the state Heritage Commission.

The Astoria Ferry Group, a nonprofit seeking to restore the historic Tourist No. 2 ferry, received $20,000 to weatherize the vessel's topside. The ferry recently moved to Pier 39, where volunteers are restoring it in the hopes of getting certified by the Coast Guard to take large groups out on the Columbia River.

William Hicks, owner of the Abeco Building, received $7,100 through the state's Diamonds in the Rough grant program to remove a metallic facade along the Commercial Street storefront. Hicks purchased the building last year and has been restoring it into an indoor marketplace named Astor Court. He must provide an equal match to the state grant.

The grants were part of $206,000 awarded to 13 historic properties and archaeology projects around the state.

New dock planned along Youngs Bay

The Daily Astorian

Local business owner Steve Cullen is creating a new recreational dock along Youngs Bay.

Cullen owns a plot of land along Olney Avenue east of the Astoria Recreation Center.

The Cullen Pier Restoration Project would connect two existing piers jutting out from the property, adding nearly 6,000 square feet. The project would also replace up to 60 historical pilings.

Cullen, who owns agricultural bagging company Versa

Corp., in February secured a building permit for a new storage building at the site.

Cullen was not immediately available for comment. The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers is taking comments on the project until Aug. 1.

Longtime Clatskanie resident Kerttu Jolma entered eternal life on July 5, 2018, in Austin, Texas, after an extended struggle with dementia.

Kerttu embodied strength, industriousness, independence and joy, all wrapped up into a petite dynamo. She made friends easily with a wonderful sense of humor, a ready laugh and her unforgettable smile. Always adventuresome, moving forward to the next experience was top of mind.

Kerttu was passionate about "garage-saling," gardening, dancing and, especially at Suomi Hall, chatting over "kahvi ja pulla," and about all things Finnish. She was a committed follower of Jesus Christ.

Kerttu Inkeri Ojala was born on Oct. 15, 1927, in Kalajoki, Finland. She immigrated to the Astoria area in the spring of 1950. In Clatskanie she met Paul Jolma, and after a whirlwind romance, they were married in Mayger Church on Oct. 15, 1950, her birthday.

Together they raised a family while residing on a farm in Mayger until 1992, then moved to Clatskanie. Upon the death of her loved husband "Pauli" in 2003, Kerttu continued to reside in Clatskanie until 2015. She then moved to Longview, Washington, and later to Austin, Texas, to be close to her daughter, Ellen.

She is preceded in death by her husband, Paul Jolma; parents, Jussi and Saimi Ojala; brothers, Lauri Ojala and Arvo Ojala; and sisters, Anna Pahkala, Vera Pehkonen and Kaino Leethem.

Allen Building in Astoria sold

By EDWARD STRATTON
The Daily Astorian

Ted Osborn, a local architect and preservationist, has sold the Allen Building at the corner of Commercial and 10th streets in Astoria to Lake Oswego couple Daniel Kaiser and Yvonne Troutman.

Troutman, who manages a plastic surgery clinic in Clackamas, said she and Kaiser, an auto dealership owner and former world foosball champion, fell in love with Astoria and were looking for opportunities to invest locally. The two also own a 19th century duplex in Astoria and visit often.

"It's really important to me to keep the vibe of what Astoria is," Troutman said. "My concern is that as it becomes a more popular destination, there will be more outside interests coming in that don't pertain to Astoria."

The couple face filling all three of the Allen Building's storefronts. Home decor store In the Boudoir and consignment clothing shop The Fox & Fawn both closed in March. Ratz & Co., a graphic design studio in the building's 10th Street storefront, will close in October when owner Dave McMacken retires.

The couple are looking for unique businesses that will appeal to locals and tourists alike, Troutman said. "I think what's going to be important is finding businesses that are sustainable year-round."

Built in 1924, the Allen Building originally housed a shoe store and a men's clothing company. Osborn and his wife, Wendy, purchased the building in 2011 as a fixer-upper. They won a Dr. Edward Harvey Award for Historic Preservation from the city in 2014.
