UNIVERSAL VIDEO

In October 1983, brothers Steve and Jim Haugen opened Universal Video with 400 square feet and 175 movies. In 1984 they began moving more video's into the adjoining business, formerly known as George Bee's discount Books, then slowly but surely their business grew into what they have today. The Universal showroom is an enormous 3000 square feet, housing 25,000+ titles, with an extensive special DVD section. You can find videos dating back to 1915, the Birth of a Nation, in black and white to new releases. You know immediately when you walk into this video store why it is so successful... Steve and Jim always have a smile on their face, a warm hello and ask, may I help you?
