

Veterans: The American Legion is planning a veterans museum

read aloud the names of the 34 confirmed deaths in battle from Clatsop County. The American Legion is planning a monument with their names on the front, and those of the more than 300 people from the county who served in the war on the back, to go near the Doughboy. The American Legion will soon bring the concept before the city's Historic Landmarks Commission, Phillips said.

The influence of veterans was on display throughout the day's celebrations.

It was local veterans who donated $60,000 to help construct the library, said Jimmy

The Doughboy Monument was the site of a ceremony on Veterans Day to commemorate the end of World War I.

Pearson, the library director. The Flag Room is a memorial to local veterans, adorned with a plaque in honor of Staff Sgt. Everett J. Salvon, who died in World War II.

"As the historian for the American Legion, I feel it is my job to inform us of our past so that we don't make the mistakes in our future," Pearson said.

The American Legion and an association of businesses in Uniontown silently raised about $5,000 to fund the purchase of the Doughboy Monument, a bronze statue by sculptor John Paulding named "Over the Top at Cantigny" in honor of the first major U.S. victory in World War I, and the base and restrooms designed by architect Charles T. Diamond.

The local American Legion, formed by returning World War I veterans, was one of the first created in the U.S. in July 1919. Its members were soon put to work as guards after a major fire destroyed much of Astoria in 1922.

The American Legion is planning a veterans museum in the upstairs of its hall on Exchange Street. The hope is to have it open by July, when the group celebrates its centennial and Astoria hosts the statewide American Legion convention, Phillips said.
