

Weigh your mends at Repair Cafe

ASTORIA — And the number is 1,598 for this year — January through October. That's how many pounds of repairable items the volunteers at Astoria's Repair Cafe have weighed and repaired, or given advice on, to keep items — from jeans to weed-whackers — from ending up in a landfill.

Astoria's next Repair Cafe is 6 to 8 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 28, at 1010 Duane St.

Repair Cafe is a community of people who repair, sew, sharpen and give expert advice on pretty much anything that is broken, torn, dull or in need of repair. (No gas engines.)

Join us with your repairables on the fourth Wednesday of each month, except for next month when our December event will be one week earlier: Dec. 19.

Philosophy

His worry over his late mother's devotion to a radical Irish-based Christian cult called "Two by Twos" helped shape his less restrictive beliefs which are encapsulated in John Fugelsan's 1997 interview of George Harrison.

It was the last significant TV interview with Harrison, who died in 2001. The "quiet Beatle" spoke about human consciousness and the spiritual insights he learned collaborating with sitar player Ravi Shankar and studying with the Indian mystic Maharishi Mahesh Yogi.

Peterson rejected the radical elements of the cult, instead embracing what he calls a "love of God's light." Like Harrison, he believes everyone should choose their own path.

"If I can be the best that I can be, then everybody benefits. Life is a bunch of experiences that can all be positive — if you make them positive," he said. "Because, if you have negative things in your life, and negative things like regret, you have anger and that just hurts you."
