Kim Angelis and friends perform at Pioneer church

WARRENTON — Three talented local musicians present an outstanding program of music at 4 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 2, the first Sunday of Advent, at Warrenton's Pioneer Presbyterian Church.

The program includes the world premiere of violinist Kim Angelis' recent composition based on "My Soul Glorifies the Lord," commissioned by Pioneer Presbyterian.

Joining Angelis will be soprano Bereniece Jones-Centeno and pianist Jennifer Goodenberger. The program features both Angelis' classically influenced compositions and Goodenberger's contemplative works.

Admission is by donation and refreshments will be served. Pioneer Presbyterian Church is at 33324 Patriot Way, next to Camp Rilea.

For more information, call 503-861-2421 or visit pioneerchurchpcusa.org.

You're not afraid of the Dark Arts, are you?

ASTORIA — Tickets to Fort George Brewery's Festival of Dark Arts are now on sale.

Ticket-bearers will enter a magical menagerie of art and macabre entertainment, all while surrounded by the boldest collection of rare stouts ever assembled.

The festival takes place noon to 10 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 16, on the Fort George Block, 1483 Duane St.

You'll be entranced by craftspeople who work with ice, glass, ink and iron. Three stages will swell with live music and fanciful performances. And your palate will darken with delight as more than 65 exquisitely unique stouts overflow the Fort George campus.

For a link to tickets, visit festivalofdarkarts.com. Tickets include a Festival of Dark Arts grimoire, a 2019 festival glass and 12 drink tokens, with addi-
