

Photos by Colin Murphey/The Daily Astorian
Andrew Telford practices pumping water using equipment that could be delivered by the Coast Guard in case of an emergency.

FISHING THE MOST DANGEROUS GAME

By COLIN MURPHEY
The Daily Astorian

Every year the Bureau of Labor Statistics lists the most dangerous jobs in the country — and every year, commercial fishing is near the top. In 2018, it was second only to logging. Crew from the F/V Courageous trained this week at the Warrenton Marina and East Mooring Basin on emergency scenarios, such as someone overboard, extinguishing fires or pumping out water from flooding.

Fishing vessel crew prepare to enter the cold waters near the East Mooring Basin.

Crew from the F/V Courageous run through a fire drill.

A student enters the water in a survival suit.

Sparky Hankins communicates with the ship's crew during a fire drill.

Students practice using their survival suits.