Search suspended for missing teen

19-year-old man disappears during duck hunting trip

By BRENNA VISSER
The Daily Astorian

A teenager from the Bethany area is still missing after disappearing during a duck hunting trip on the Columbia River on Saturday.

Riley Salisbury, 19, was reported missing to the Coast Guard around noon Saturday, said Petty Officer

Levi Reed, after his father attempted to call him on his cellphone and received no response. Salisbury and his father were duck hunting together but in separate boats, communicating regularly via cellphone.

He disappeared near Russian Island, Lorelee Salisbury, Riley’s mother, told KPTV Sunday.

After 19 hours, the Coast Guard found Salisbury’s boat near Karlson Island, about a mile away from where he was hunting, still filled with his personal identification, his shotgun and phone, but found no sign of the 19-year-old.

The Coast Guard suspended the search at 12:30 p.m. Sunday. It will remain suspended unless new details emerge, Reed said.

“Our thoughts and prayers are with the family. We did everything we could over 19 hours of searching,” Reed said. “We just didn’t come out with a good outcome, and again, our thoughts are with the family.”

Coast Guard medevacs ailing crewman

The Daily Astorian

The Coast Guard evacuated a sick crewman off a commercial vessel 25 miles west of Washington’s Willapa Bay Friday morning.

Watchstanders received a call from a shoreside doctor around 5 a.m. recommending the ill man, a second engineer aboard the vehicle carrier Garnet Leader, be hospitalized within six to eight hours. The vessel is scheduled to moor in Vancouver, Washington, Saturday.

A Coast Guard helicopter crew launched and hoisted the man around 6:45 a.m., delivering him to Astoria Regional Airport, from which he was taken to Columbia Memorial Hospital in Astoria by paramedics.
