completing the campus and expanding the museum's educational focus.

The museum restored the Barbey Maritime Center, a former rail depot where it hosts events and boatbuilding classes. But the building was blocked to westbound traffic by the former auto center.

"It's going to open up the viewscape for the public ... to see the historic rail depot and the Columbia River," said Bruce Jones, the museum's deputy director.

Once complete, the park will be open to the public.
