

The ceremony was held in a circle with the bride and groom surrounded by the loving energy of family, friends and community. "After Horus and I entered the ceremony space we had two friends open with a song that helped everyone get into their heart space," said Dana. A simple djembe drum resonated with an unadorned intention: "we open our hearts, to witness your hearts, we open our hearts in love." A golden moment for Dana was the memory of feeling "the deep love that resonated from Horus as he read his vows."

When the couple looks back on their weekend in Cannon Beach, the most fitting metaphor is a river of love: "there was such a feeling of love and joy over the course of the weekend that it felt like we were simply being carried by it – by love." ❤️
