

Jail's contract with ICE does not violate sanctuary law

Legal test in Wasco County

By CONRAD WILSON
Oregon Public Broadcasting

A Wasco County judge ruled Friday an Oregon jail's contract with U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement does not violate the state's so-called sanctuary law — but some of the jail's practices do.

A group of Wasco County taxpayers filed a lawsuit in 2017 arguing the Northern Oregon Regional Corrections Facility in The Dalles — known as NORCOR — was violating Oregon's 31-year-old sanctuary law, in part because of the jail's contract with ICE.

The ruling is the first aimed at defining Oregon's sanctuary law, which limits its how much local law enforcement can cooperate with federal immigration officials.

The ruling is a significant blow to immigration activists, who turned to the courts as they try to force NORCOR to end its contract with ICE.

Oregon's sanctuary law states that law enforcement can't use local resources to detect or apprehend people whose only violation is being in the United States in breach of federal immigration laws.

"NORCOR is not apprehending, arresting, or seizing federal detainees or inmates as those terms are commonly used or within their ordinary meaning, nor are NORCOR's actions for the purpose of apprehending," Judge John Wolf wrote in his ruling.

He added that ICE detainees "have been apprehended, arrested or seized by ICE prior to arriving at NORCOR."

That argument is what NORCOR has claimed since the lawsuit was filed.

"On the central and primary issue in this case, the court has ruled that NORCOR's contract with the federal government does not violate state law," said Derek Ashton, NORCOR's attorney. "Today's decision ensures that critical funding source will remain in place."

NORCOR is the jail for Hood River, Wasco, Sherman and Gilliam counties and relies on its ICE contract to offset a recent dip in tax revenue. For years, ICE has paid the jail $80 per detainee, per day. In some fiscal years that's translated to $800,000 of the operating budget.

ICE did not immediately comment Friday.

Some Washington sheriffs refuse to enforce new gun restrictions

By NICHOLAS K. GERANIOS
Associated Press

SPOKANE, Wash. — Sheriffs in a dozen Washington counties say they won't enforce the state's sweeping new restrictions on semi-automatic rifles until the courts decide whether they are constitutional.

A statewide initiative approved by voters in November raised the minimum age for buying semi-automatic rifles from 18 to 21, required buyers to first pass a firearms safety course and added expanded background checks and gun storage requirements, among other things. It was among the most comprehensive of a string of state-level gun-control measures enacted in the U.S. after last year's shooting at a Florida high school.

The National Rifle Association and the Second Amendment Foundation have filed a lawsuit in federal court alleging the initiative is unconstitutional. They say its purchasing requirements violate the right to bear arms and stray into the regulation of interstate commerce, which is the province of the federal government.

Car chase ends in crash near Gearhart

The Daily Astorian

A 16-year-old girl was arrested Saturday after allegedly leading police on a high-speed pursuit through Seaside before crashing into a ditch north of Gearhart.

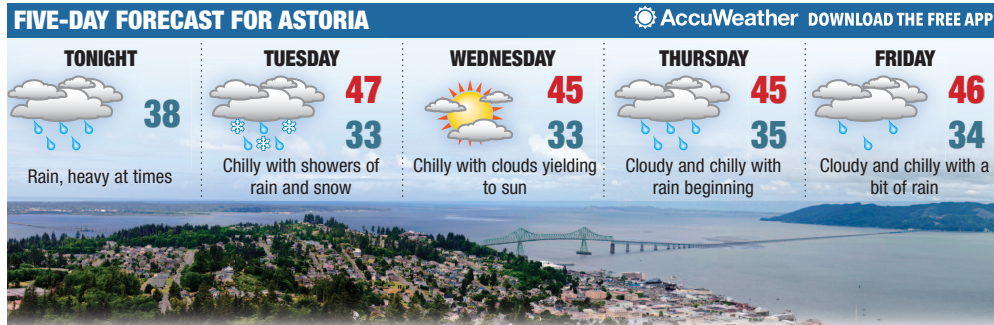

The pursuit began after Oregon State Police attempted to stop the driver near Beerman Creek Lane on U.S. Highway 101 to investigate a reported road rage incident.

The driver started swerving out of the lane and then sped away, according to police. Seaside police and a Clatsop County Sheriff's Office deputy began pursuing the vehicle as it sped through Seaside and Gearhart, but ultimately called off the pursuit due to the driver's reckless driving.

northbound before crashing into a ditch near Toyas Lane. The 16-year-old, who was not publicly identified, was charged with reckless driving, driving under the influence of controlled substances and attempting to elude a police officer. She was also charged with recklessly endangering the lives of her three passengers, two of which were also minors.

Paul Franklin Underhill

Astoria
Oct. 24, 1949 — Jan. 30, 2019

Paul Franklin Underhill, age 69, died peacefully on Jan. 30, 2019, at Adventist Medical Center, after a short illness.

Paul was born in Seaside, Oregon, on Oct. 24, 1949, to Gene and Shirley Underhill. At the age of 5, the family moved to the farm on Logan Road, where Paul resided for the rest of his life.

He graduated from Astoria High School in 1967, and from Clatsop Community College in 1970. He started his 41-year sawmill career at Warrenton Lumber Mill on the green chain in 1969, eventually working his way up to head rig Sawyer. He was known for blasting rock 'n' roll over the intercom system when a great song came on.

In 1975, he married Lorell Koskela, and they raised their two children, Michelle and Eugene, on the farm. Later they divorced.

Paul was an accomplished welder, building trailers, boats and eventually his crab boat, the Michelle D.

He was an auto mechanic extraordinaire who could fix or jerry-rig anything to run. He was a mentor to many when it came to rebuilding engines. He was a part of the Active Enterprises racing team, where he mentored high school kids in engine repairs and racing at Woodburn Race Track.

His two greatest pleasures were going hunting in Eastern Oregon with friends and family every year, where getting a deer was optional to having fun. The other was going to NASCAR races in Las Vegas, where he made lifelong friends.

Paul is survived by his partner, Wanda Rollo; his children, Eugene (Kelli) and Michelle (fiancé Phil); his brother, Darwin (Vanessa); and grandchildren, Kamryn, Kol, Karsen and Kilian, all of Astoria. He is also survived by his partner's children, Misty (Tom) Burchardt and Mandy (Jon) Halk.
