

County makes extra on jail bond sale

The Daily Astorian

Clatsop County made more than $23.4 million on the sale of nearly $20 million worth of general obligation bonds approved by voters to relocate the jail from Astoria to the former North Coast Youth Correctional Facility in Warrenton. The $3.4 million premium will be kept in reserve to help offset any cost overruns. Because of a strong financial rating for the county, the bonds will also cost property owners 20 cents per $1,000 of assessed value, instead of the 21 cents originally estimated. "We are beyond ecstatic at the results of this recent bond sale," Monica Steele, the interim county manager, said in a news release. "This is a perfect example of strong budget policies that instill prudent fiscal management. Clatsop County taxpayers will reap substantial savings due to these efforts." Carol Samuels, managing director for the investment bank Piper Jaffray, said in the release that "investors are increasingly focused on credit quality and the rating of the issuer. The county's rating from Moody's, which reflects the strong financial management of the county and the economic stability of the community, was critical to the bond sale and an important factor driving demand for the bonds." Investors have looked favorably upon bonds amid an erratic stock market, leading to similarly strong results for other local sales. The Astoria School District received a $9.4 million premium on the sale of $70 million worth of bonds to remodel and rebuild portions of its four campuses. Warrenton received nearly $4 million more than the $38.5 million in bonds voters approved to buy a master campus and build a new middle school.

Feds seek comment on Astoria Marine cleanup

The Daily Astorian

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers is seeking comment on the state-mandated cleanup plan for Astoria Marine Construction Co. on the Lewis and Clark River. The proposed cleanup includes removal of contamination hot spots, placement of an upland gravel cap and an in-water sand-mixing layer to enhance the natural recovery of sediment. The project requires federal review because of the company's previous removal as a federal Superfund site, because of the shipyard's presence on the National Register of Historic Places and because cleanup will modify levees and a navigational channel under the jurisdiction of the Army Corps. Comments will be considered in determining whether it would be in the public interest to proceed with the cleanup. The cleanup is the result of historical contamination from the company's contract building wooden minesweepers during World War II and the Korean War. The company has stated that the cleanup, estimated at more than $2 million, will result in its closure sometime this year. Comments on the proposed cleanup should refer to PM-F-Astoria Marine Construction-2019 and are due by March 7. They can be emailed to eric.v.blum@usace.army.mil; mailed to U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Portland District, ATTN: Mr. Eric V. Blum, 333 SW 1st Ave., Portland, OR, 97204-3440; or mailed to P.O. Box 2946 Portland, OR, 97208-2946.

The Daily Astorian

Jonathan Allan of the Oregon Department of Geology and Mineral Industries will give a presentation March 6 about the organization's new "Beat the Wave" project, a study intended to map out the most efficient roads and trails to safety in a Cascadia Subduction Zone earthquake and tsunami. The project is aimed at determining how much time people in the Nehalem Bay region would have to evacuate to safety after an earthquake, where they would need to go, and how fast they would have to travel to get there safely. The presentation will be hosted by the Emergency Volunteer Corps of Nehalem Bay at 1 p.m. at the Pine Grove Community House in Manzanita.

The upcoming free day, the third of 12 free days the agency will offer in 2019, applies only to state parks; the Discover Pass is still required on state fish and wildlife and natural resources lands. The next free days will be April 20 and 22.
