

Washed Ashore presents 'Art to Save the Sea'

SEASIDE — Artists and community organizers gather to reclaim the future and ignite powerful social change in consumer and visitor behavior.

Everyone who has seen Washed Ashore's stunning pieces of public art made from reclaimed marine debris has wondered "How'd they do that?"

Art to Save The Sea happens at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, May 7 at Seaside Brewing, 851 Broadway. Search Eventbrite "Art To Save The Sea" for additional events in Bay City, Gleneden Beach, Yachats and Brookings. Attendees of these gatherings will learn the process behind these masterpieces and see a visual presentation by John Tannous, executive director of Washed Ashore, which explains the process.

Over the next two years several large pieces of public art will be created and sighted in various communities on the central and North Oregon Coast. Communities interested in securing such a piece of public art should attend and inquire about the siting process.

After learning about the unique process Washed Ashore has championed, interested artists and community organizers can apply for a multi-week artist residency in Bandon to dive deeper into their process and support the creation of future pieces of public art from marine debris.

Some scholarships and living stipends are available by the generous support of the Oregon Coast Visitors Association and Travel Oregon.

Come sail away with the Astoria Yacht Club

ASTORIA — Astoria Yacht Club holds its annual open house from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, May 4, in conjunction with the opening day of sail racing.

At 1 p.m., there is a skipper's meeting before the first race, which begins at 2. Both activities will take place in the club's meeting room upstairs in the Chinook building, 300 Industry St., at the West Mooring Basin.

Club members will be on hand to answer questions about the club and about sailing and boating on the Lower Columbia and northwest coastal waters.

In addition to information about the club and its annual schedule of on-the-water and social events, participants can hear about the annual Oregon Offshore sailboat race from Astoria to Victoria, British Columbia, and learn about sailing on the Lower Columbia.

A talk covering crew safety and responsibilities, proper clothing and gear and basic orientation to sailing is at 11 a.m.

Depending on available vessels, participants will have a chance to get underway with club members that afternoon. Prospective crew are asked to bring a warm jacket, hat and life jacket, if they have one.
