

The King Louie Trio headlines this year's Astoria Jazz Festival.

Astoria Jazz Festival on tap this weekend

ASTORIA — The Astoria Jazz Festival presents a plethora of jazz offerings Friday through Saturday.

The festival kicks off at 6 p.m. Friday night at the Bridgewater Bistro with the Equinox, a jazz trio comprised of coastal jazz mainstay guitarist Dave Drury with Todd Pederson on bass and Shelley Loring Barker on flute.

The trio “take their audiences on a musical tour that personifies modern, standards and contemporary jazz.” Performances include several of Drury’s original compositions.

The evening continues with the Mike Metzner Trio at WineKraft at 7 p.m. Metzner is on keyboard with Luke Ydstie on bass and Cooper Trails on drums.

Then on Saturday saxophonist R.J. Marx and guitar/vocalist John Orr play songs from the American Songbook, swing, bebop and modern jazz at the Moose Lodge at 6 p.m.

The King Louie Pain Organ Trio headlines the event at 8 p.m. Saturday at KALA. Tickets are $18.50 in advance at libertyastoria.showare.com or $20 at the door.

The jazz festival is co-organized by Bruce Watts and Ron Craig.

Ashleigh Flynn and the Riveters perform at the Hoffman Center Nov. 9.

‘Hard kicking’ country, rock on the coast

MANZANITA — Kentucky singer-songwriter brings bluegrass, classic rock and Motown to the coast. The Hoffman Center presents Ashleigh Flynn and The Riveters at 7 p.m. on Saturday, Nov. 9.

Like the Ohio to muddy Ole’ Miss,

Flynn follows her troubadour heart. The charismatic performer who has been featured at Bonnaroo and Bumbershoot has two releases and a live EP. The all female band recorded their most recent, 10 track album in Portland.
