

AUTUMN UNFOLDS IN ASTORIA

By HAILEY HOFFMAN
The Astorian

With November just around the corner, trees throughout Astoria shift from the soft greens of summer to the bright reds, oranges and yellows of fall.

Photos by Hailey Hoffman/The Astorian

A canopy of trees along Exchange Street in Astoria.

A large tree's leaves shift from green to gold outside the Flavel House Museum in Astoria.

The rising sun filters through residual fog in the trees off Nehalem Highway.

Bright orange leaves glow in the light of the setting sun.

The green and yellow trees reflect off Youngs River in the golden morning light.