

NOT QUITE A GHOST TOWN

An exploration of Westport

BY JENNIFER NIGHTINGALE

On my way back to Astoria from Portland, I stopped at the McVay Livery in the tiny hamlet of Westport. I treated myself to a fresh cinnamon roll, a hot cup of coffee and conversation with Michael McVay, the café's owner.

Four years ago, McVay was a technical analyst for The Boeing Company. While looking around on the internet, he was intrigued by a for sale posting of an old 1935 service station on Highway 30 in
