Eva Lavina (Townsend) Perkins

Astoria

May 25, 1937 — Nov. 21, 2019

Eva Lavina (Townsend) Perkins, born May 25, 1937, passed peacefully on Nov. 21, 2019, at Clatsop Care Center.

Eva was born in Astoria, Oregon. She was the first child of Tom and Adora Morris. Eva was raised with her brother, Chuck, and sister, Jay Jean, in Oregon City, Oregon. She attended public schools in Oregon City through the eighth grade. Eva enjoyed learning throughout her life and one could say she had a strong self-education.

After her formal education, Eva married and three daughters followed, Georgeana, Lai Loris “Lori” and Dorene. Eva and her girls moved from Oregon City to Los Angeles, California, and finally settled back in Astoria in 1962.

Eva worked at Barbey’s Cannery and Leon’s Apparel. She later was employed at Andrew and Steve’s Cafe, where she met Richard “Rich” Perkins.

Eva and Rich married on April 7, 1965, in Astoria. Eva, Rich and the girls moved into their Bond Street home in the summer of 1966.

Eva spent a lifetime of fishing and hunting, camping and traveling. When the three daughters were younger, there was a lot of salmon and sturgeon fishing going on. Eva went to Hart Mountain antelope hunting, Steen’s Mountain for big horn sheep and all over Oregon hunting deer and elk.

Eva was a snowbird for 22 years. She spent 13 years traveling in Mexico along with many trips across the U.S. and Canada.

Eva is survived by her loving husband, Richard, and her three daughters, Georgeana (and Ray Compton) of Bend, Oregon, Lori (and Robert Martin) of Oak Harbor, Washington, and Dorene (and Michael Berg) of Olympia, Washington. Eva is also survived by numerous grandchildren, great-grandchildren and many nieces and nephews.

The family would like to express their heart-felt gratitude for the loving care Eva received while at Clatsop Care.

Xerox readies hostile bid for HP

By MIKE ROGOWAY

Printer and copier company Xerox said Tuesday it will proceed with a hostile bid for HP after being rebuffed in efforts to negotiate a takeover.

“We plan to engage directly with HP shareholders to solicit their support in urging the HP board to do the right thing and pursue this compelling opportunity,” Xerox CEO John Visentin wrote in a letter to HP’s board.

The two fading tech giants have been quietly discussing a combination since last summer. The talks broke into the open earlier this month when Xerox offered $33.5 billion, $22 a share, for HP.

HP said it was open to continued talks but dubious Xerox could pull off the deal without taking on enormous debt that might sink the businesses. Investors were skeptical, too, that a single company would be better able to cope with the challenges the two businesses have been facing separately.

Xerox’s headquarters are in Connecticut and HP’s base is in Silicon Valley. But each has substantial operations in the Silicon Forest, with Xerox’s color printing group operating on the old Tektronix campus in Wilsonville and HP running research sites in Vancouver and Corvallis.

HP emerged four years ago from the company formerly known as Hewlett-Packard Co. HP inherited the old company’s printer and computer businesses – both of which have suffered as demand for printer services and PCs declined.

Xerox has been weathering similar troubles amid diminished interest in printed documents during the digital age. But it argues the two companies could save billions of dollars by combining and cutting redundant costs – some of which could be invested in new technologies.

Over the weekend HP rejected Xerox’s demand that the two companies begin a formal process of reviewing each other’s financial records as a step toward bringing the businesses together. HP said Xerox’s offer wasn’t high enough and said it doubted Xerox’s own “viability.”

Responding Tuesday, Xerox said it will follow through with its threat to make a hostile bid directly to HP shareholders.

“While you may not appreciate our ‘aggressive’ tactics, we will not apologize for them,” Visentin wrote.

Investors remain dubious. HP shares fell 1.7% at Tuesday’s open to $19.80, below Xerox’s $22 offer price. Xerox shares fell 0.7% to $38.51.

Billionaire investor Carl Icahn owns stock in both companies and has said he supports efforts to bringing them together. It’s unclear, though, how much of his own capital he intends to deploy to make that happen.
