

Photos by Hailey Hoffman/The Astorian

Liberty Theatre Executive Director Jennifer Crockett and Will Rose lead a tour group through the basement of the theater, which will house concessions after phase one of renovations is complete.

THESE WALLS TELL STORIES

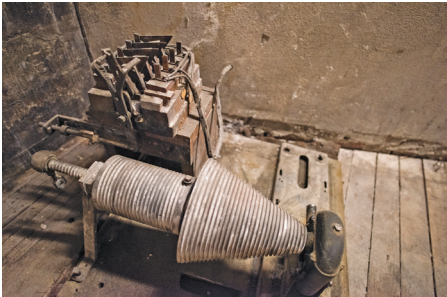

Linda Moreland and Ted Osborn peek into the fly loft at the top of the Liberty Theatre.

Liberty Theatre shows renovation progress

By HAILEY HOFFMAN
The Astorian

The Liberty Theatre opened its doors to the community Wednesday afternoon to show off new renovations. The theater plans to finish phase one of renovations by the theater's 95th birthday in April. Thus far, there have been significant changes to the basement and work on the exterior of the building.

The Liberty Theatre's original winch to lift and lower curtains, drapery and other decorations sits in the fly loft, high above the stage. The winch is too heavy to move from its location in the corner of the building.

LEFT: From left, Wendy Osborn, Ted Osborn, Linda Moreland and Jennifer Crockett stand on top of the grand chandelier in the rafters. RIGHT: The new dressing rooms will be housed in the basement beneath the Pilot House Distillery.

Visitors eat cheese and sip wine on the stage of the Liberty Theatre after touring the building.

