Staying social

Local organizations offer online classes, services

mals. The Oregon cameras feature sharks, otters and seabirds. The Seattle Aquarium's cameras showcase harbor seals and sea otters.

In an area that is often jam-packed with concerts, trivia nights and other events, this era of social distancing can quickly leave residents at a loss of how to fill time. Yet, with the help of local organizations, as well as those in larger cities like Portland and Seattle, there are ways to stay busy without watching Netflix.

Cooking

Chef Outta Water, led by Baked Alaska chef Chris Holen and his business partner Simon Millcock, is uploading online cooking videos.

"Our goal is to put this content into the hands of folks that are hunkered down in an effort to give them some ideas of how they can put all of their food supplies to use, as well as engage with family while making meals at home," Holen said.

Here is a roundup of free activities to do online.
