

KEEPING CREATIVE

Residents get active while staying home

BY ALYSSA EVANS

Along Washington and Oregon's coasts, residents are continuing to stay active while following the states' stay at home orders. Locals are using their creativity by spending time in their backyards, finishing intense puzzles and baking delightful treats. Here is a peek at some of the activities keeping locals entertained.

CLOCKWISE FROM LEFT: Amanda Baldwin has been spending family time blowing bubbles with her son and doing work in her backyard. Kristine Leedy's daughter, Zoe, introduced her younger brother, Ryder, to one of the family's chickens. In Ilwaco, Luisa Mack has been trying new bread recipes. Warrenton resident Rachel Ward set up an outdoor lunch for her children.
