

'THE KEEPER OF OUR PAST'

Columbia Pacific museum reopens with new exhibit

BY KATHERINE LACAZE

The Columbia Pacific Heritage Museum has reopened to the public under a new executive director and with an exhibit inspired by the institution's effort to stay connected to the community via social media during the past seven months.

Madeline Moore started Sept. 1, taking over for Betsy Millard, who will work as the museum's volunteer collections manager. Although new to the executive director position, Moore is no stranger to the museum itself.

"I've been involved with the museum for about 26 years, since I was 5 years old,"
