

OBITUARIES

Pamela J. Norlin
Astoria
May 11, 1949 — Oct. 27, 2020

Pamela J. Norlin passed away on Tuesday, Oct. 27, 2020, in Astoria, Oregon. She was 71.

Pam was born in Astoria on May 11, 1949, and was the daughter of Arvi and Sylvia Hynen. She grew up in Svensen and graduated from Knappa High School in the Class of 1967.

Pam met her true love, Tommy Norlin, in February 1969, and they married on Sept. 12, 1970.

Pam worked for several doctors' offices, the Oregon Youth Authority, and completed her career at the state Department of Human Services, Child Welfare, in Astoria.

Pamela Norlin

Pam and Tom loved classic cars and most of all, their dogs. They were their kids. To name just a few, there was "Dolly," "Precious," "Kelly," "Katie" and "Sterling."

Tommy preceded Pam in death. They leave behind their goddaughter, Christi Schmidt; godson, Cody Schmidt; and god "brats" Skyler and Brooklyn Schmidt, all residing in Scappoose, Oregon.

She is also survived by a sister, Judy Flues, of Astoria; a sister-in-law, Marge Norlin, of Houston, Texas; as well as numerous nieces and nephews.

Warrenton OKs nighttime deer hunts at airport

Animals a danger for aircraft
By EDWARD STRATTON
The Astorian

WARRENTON — The Port of Astoria got city approval for nighttime hunts to kill deer causing a danger to aircraft at the Astoria Regional Airport.

Gary Kobes, the airport manager, said the Port has 10 kill permits from the state Department of Fish and Wildlife and more available if needed.

"I got a call from the Coast Guard about a week and a half, two weeks ago, that there were eight or 10 deer out on the runway one night, and went out the following night and, in about an hour's time, spotted nine or 10 deer," Kobes told the City Commission Tuesday.

Deer are considered dangerous to aircraft when inside a fence surrounding the runways. A Learjet from the Canadian military struck an elk in the early 2000s and caught fire. Everyone escaped, but the plane was destroyed, Kobes said. The Port has erected a fence and cattle guards on roadways around the airfield to keep animals out.

"I don't know whether the deer were inside the fence, and they multiplied over time, or they somehow found a way through, which is just as likely," Kobes said. "We've never seen any more than a couple out there at any one time, but apparently, with the sighting and my observation, the count is significantly high (and) we need to get it down."

Volunteers will begin hunting in the coming week at night with spotlights to avoid people on the Airport Dike Trail, Kobes said. The hunts could happen over several weeks, he said, and the meat will be distributed to food banks.

The City Commission also gave police permission to shut down the Airport Dike Trail during hunts and post signs to notify the public. Kobes said he will coordinate the hunts with Police Chief Mathew Workman, who said he expects a flood of calls in response to the gunfire.

The nighttime hunting will also help avoid bird hunters, who are allowed by state law within three specific areas in city limits using shotguns and steel pellets. Warrenton code also allows the discharge of firearms on private property with permission from the police.

"There's only a few places in town for you to have a range like some people do, (where) they build up a berm and it's done safely," Workman said. "Then yeah, you can do that within the city limits. We're kind of unique that way."

Record: Vast majority of fundraising came from interests based in Portland and Salem

Weber raised more than $1.2 million, including more than $700,000 from Evergreen Oregon. Rosser said the North Coast race competed for air time in the Portland market with congressional and gubernatorial elections targeting voters in southwest Washington state; another congressional race in southern Oregon; and numerous other state House and Senate races.

Boothe-Schmidt raised more than $1.5 million, including more than $550,000 from Future PAC, the primary fundraising arm of state House Democrats.

"Whether you're in Salem or the Portland suburbs, or even the North Coast, you still have all of these races that are in the most expensive media market in the state," a Future PAC representative said. "And they're all competing for air time."

Future PAC said their ad buyer had never seen TV get so expensive in the final two weeks of a campaign.

"If (Republicans) spend a lot, we spend a lot," they said. "If we spend a lot, they spend a lot. And it just kind of turns into an arms race, basically ... We were both trying to read each other, read the tea leaves of what the other side was doing."

Democrats were trying to hold on to super-majorities in the House and Senate, making open seats all the more strategic.

Democratic state Rep. Caddy McKeown chose not to run again for her seat in House District 9 around Coos Bay, creating another competitive district on the coast.

Republican Gerald "Boomer" Wright defeated Democrat Cal Mukumoto 57% to 42%. But the race cost just over $800,000, less than one-third of House District 32. Rosser and the representative from Future PAC both said the race there was considered less competitive and less expensive to advertise on TV.

"They're in the Eugene broadcast market, which is like half as much" as Portland, the representative from Future PAC said.

The vast majority of money coming into the North Coast race came from interests based in Portland and Salem flooding the battleground.

Rosser argued that Weber, who was primarily backed by business, raised more local donations than any other Republican ever has in House District 32, and more than any state Republican candidate this election.

The representative from Future PAC argued that Boothe-Schmidt's donations, largely from unions, came from a conglomeration of workers, many of whom live in the district, and are fundamentally different from the corporations that backed Weber.

Oregon voters in November overwhelmingly approved Measure 107, which allows the Legislature, local governments or voters to place limits on campaign contributions and spending, require the disclosure of campaign financing and identify the donors behind campaign advertisements.

Roberta 'Bobbi' Brice
Superior, Wisconsin
July 21, 1949 — Nov. 6, 2020

Bobbi Brice passed away Nov. 6, 2020, in Superior, Wisconsin. Bobbi was Aunt Bobbi, big sister, cousin, and, to many, dear friend.

She graduated from the University of Wisconsin-Madison, and became a phenomenal special education teacher, loved by her students and families.

Though raised in Wisconsin, Bobbi wanted to live where she could see the ocean and mountains together. She moved to Oregon in the mid-1970s. Oregon was her home. She taught special education in the early years. She later joined the staff at Tillamook Bay Community College in the 1980s, and then Clatsop Community College.

Roberta Brice

at the Columbia River Coffee Roaster was a joy for her.

Bobbi was an exceptionally intelligent person, and quick-witted. She was tenacious, especially when it came to serving and supporting others. Her generosity and compassion were her driving life force. She was devoted to the American Association of University Women and Women Inter-ested in Going to School (WINGS) because she believed in equity and opportunity for women, for everyone.

She co-founded Let's Stamp Out Hunger because she believed it was wrong for anyone to be without food. She supported the Astoria Warming Center because she believed everyone should have a safe, warm place to rest and have the resources they need.

She took up political causes she believed in, writing many letter campaigns. She volunteered to serve coffee at many functions, including plays, political events and fundraisers of all kinds. She made weekly donations of food and school supplies to the Lives in Transition program at Clatsop Community College.

Bobbi was an inspiration to all who knew her. She lived her life well. Bobbi made many lasting friendships with people who considered her family. She will be greatly missed.

A celebration of life is being planned for a future date in Astoria.

In her memory, donations may be sent to the Clatsop Emergency Food Bank, in care of Let's Stamp Out Hunger, 540 Grand Ave., Astoria, OR., 97103, and to the Astoria Warming Center, P.O. Box 945, Astoria, OR., 97103. Donations to the warming center may also be made online on their website astoriawarmingcenter.org

Excellence in challenging conditions. ★★★★★
Diane G.

I saw the highest standard of health safety practices in effect during my hygienist appointment today—much higher precautions than I'd seen in a local hospital when having tests last month. The new sanitation equipment and attention to patient safety at Klemp Family Dentistry is in keeping with a dental practice I consider cutting edge with respect to all my dental needs. It's wonderful having a world class dental practice here at the coast, one where I can have procedures performed for which I used to have to travel to a specialist in Portland. I have been a patient of several local dentists in the past, but none had the skill and, more importantly, the attention to patient comfort that Dr Klemp provides.
