Share your winter poetry

By ALYSSA EVANS
COAST WEEKEND EDITOR

The crisp, cool air of winter is almost officially here. Holiday decorations have been put up around our local towns. Seasonal events are happening — socially distanced and at home.

With the new seasons brings a new set of readers' poetry — the last installment of this year's seasonal poetry series.

A collection of poems will be featured in the Dec. 24 edition of Coast Weekend. If you're a poet or would like to try your hand at writing a poem, you're welcome to send poems to aevans@dailyastorian.com by Monday to be included in the collection.

Please limit entries to three poems and include your name and town of residence with your entry.

Other things to consider

Don't forget — if you're interested in participating in Coast Weekend's book club or sharing your photography in the annual photo contest, you still have time. The book club will meet at 6 p.m. Monday at bit.ly/3lFk3Sj. The photos are due Dec. 17 at coastweekend.com (click on the photo contest tab).

If you have a story idea or suggestion for something you'd like to see in Coast Weekend, send an email to aevans@dailyastorian.com or fill out the "send us your news" form on coastweekend.com.
