Kenton Cruzan

Kenton Blair Cruzan was born on Dec. 13, 1938, to Herschel K. Cruzan and Lois

E. (Elliott) Cruzan in Albany. The family later moved to Coos Bay, and Lebanon, where he graduated from Lebanon High School in Kent attended Willamette University in Salem, before transferring to the Oregon College of Education (now Western Oregon University), where he graduated in 1961.

He first taught at Crowfoot School near Lebanon. In 1965, the family moved to Astoria, where he taught for Astoria schools until he retired in 1997.

In 1961, Kenton married Kathleen (Kay) Welborn in Newport. They celebrated 61 years of love, working life and fun together with family and lifelong friends.

Kenton's daughters Cheryl, born in 1963, and Charlotte, born in 1965. His family was the most important part of his life. The family camped, fished and traveled both as children and adults with grandchildren. He was always interested and enjoyed the girls' and his grandchildren's activities.

In 1970, he started making homebrew. "Hilltop Homebrew" produced many award-winning beers. He was very proud of his three best-of-show ribbons.

Model trains were a favorite hobby Kent's, starting in 1954. He collected and set up many layouts, which included a large Christmas display in our living room bay window.

Singing was another joy of Kent's. He belonged to Peace First Lutheran Church and sang in the choir. In Lebanon and Long Beach, Washington, he joined the barbershop singers. He and his mother, Lois, and his brother, Gregg, sang "The Messiah" at Christmas, and he also sang with the North Coast Chorale. Singing at home with piano and banjo has been a fun remembrance.

He belonged to the Astoria Lions Club, Vasa Lodge No. 13, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks Lodge No. 180, the Astoria Regatta Association and Astoria Clowns.

Kenton is survived by his wife, Kay; daughters Cheryl and Bruce Johnson and Charlotte and Dale Coloma; his grandchildren, Emily Johnson and David Robinson, Eric and Bree Johnson, Kathryn (Johnson) and Taylor Rose and Mike Coloma; sister-in-law, Billie Jo Cruzan; and his nieces, Karen (Bob) Chandler, and Carol (Don) Swanson.

Kenton was preceded in death by his brother, Gregg; Gregg's son, David; and both parents.

On Sept. 24, from 1 to 4 p.m., we will have a remembrance celebration for Kenton at his home of 57 years, 1085 Eighth

Banks blanks Seaside, 2-0

The Astorian

Playing the first of two games in three days at the coast, the Banks Braves blanked Seaside 2-0 Tuesday night in a nonleague boys soccer game at Broadway Field.

It was the first game at the 3A level for the Braves, now a part of the special District 1-3A/2A/1A division, which includes Oregon Episcopal and former Cowapa League member Valley Catholic. Banks held a 1-0 halftime lead in Tuesday's game, then scored in a scramble in front of the net off a corner kick just 2:08 into the second

The Gulls had the possession advantage in the final 40 minutes, but were unable to score in their two shots on goal. An attempt from 25 yards out by Kaden Burch sailed narrowly over the crossbar.

The Braves play Thursday at Astoria (5:30 p.m., CMH Field).

National monument expansion may hinge on presidential authority

By MATEUSZ PERKOWSKI Capital Press

The fate of the Cascade-Siskiyou National Monument's expansion may hinge on the president's authority over 2.4 million acres of federal O&C Lands in western Oregon.

A federal appeals court must decide whether Congress has eliminated the president's ability to ban logging on O&C Lands within the monument's expanded footprint.

Because commercial timharvest is prohibited within the national monument, critics claim President Barack Obama lacked the power to double its size during his final days in office in 2017.

Roughly 40,000 acres added to the monument are governed by the Oregon & California Lands Act, which established logging as the primary purpose on federal forestlands retaken from railroad companies 85 years ago.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals is now considering whether Obama had the power to override that requirement under the Antiquities Act, an even older federal law that allows pres-1dents monuments.

"There is simply no way to reconcile those competing demands. They are wholly incompatible," said Julie Weis, attorney for Murphy Co., an Oregon forest products manufacturer, during oral arguments on Tuesday.

Congress dedicated O&C Lands to a sustained yield of timber production, so allowing the president to ignore that command would undermine the separation of powers among the legislative and executive branches of the U.S. government, she said.

"That would be highly repugnant to the rule of law,' Weis said. "There are limits to executive authority.'

The timber industry fears enlarged monument will further reduce the supply of logs in southern Oregon, where logging on federal lands has already been curtailed by the Endangered Species Act and other environmental statutes. County governments in the region are adversely affected by logging restrictions, since they rely on federal timber harvest revenue, while ranchers worry livestock grazing will also face greater regulatory burdens within the national monument.

Unlike other types of federal property, which are managed for multiple uses, the U.S. Bureau of Land Management cannot ban logging on vast swaths of O&C Lands, Weis said.

Commercial timber harvest cannot occur within the 110,000-acre national monument, which clearly conflicts with the dominant use of O&C Lands, she said.

"They may still be called O&C Lands but they're now off-limits to timber production," she said. "BLM does not enjoy unfettered discretion in managing these lands."
