While there is so much activity in the way of new buildings in the down town section of Hood River the heights is equally active. Many new homes, as well as new stores, are going up, and where immense pines and firs were dense two or three years ago beautiful homes are in evidence. Work on 12th street is being rapidly pushed and when completed this will be one of the best drives in the state. Several other streets on the hill are being graded and put into good condition, and a general progressiveness is manifest. The heights of Hood River gives promise of being most popular as a section of beautiful homes. The views to be obtained of Mounts Hood and Adams are superb. One is well repaid for a stroll on the heights these fine days.

O. P. Hoff, state commissioner of labor and factory inspector, visited Hood River last week. The News "factory" was in satisfactory condition, grinding out editorials and high class society printing, as usual. The genial Hoff was elated over this trip to our city, for a friend invited him for a spin into the valley. He stated that it was a pleasure and sight seeing trip long to be remembered. In conversation he referred to the thousands of people who come west, to see Oregon, pass along one edge of the state, stop at Portland, then go back home. They miss Oregon—miss the world of blossoms, where the apples grow the hand-somest and bring the biggest prices in the world. One trip through Hood River valley would be more convincing to the seeker of a great Oregon than could all the visiting that might be done in Portland and other commercial cities of the state.
