Bill Jones was an eccentric character, a local justice of the peace in a South Carolina town. He was exceedingly tall-so attenuated, in fact, that but for his bat he would not have cast a shadow. One night a number of fellow bon vivants joined him in a symposium, and many mint juleps were consumed. One of the party unsteadily produced a revolver. It was accidentally discharged, and a bullet struck Bill Jones in the leg.

Conscience stricken and wabbly with excitement and juleps, the owner of the weapon hastened to the home of the nearest doctor and pulled the door-

At length the physician, who had himself been spending a riotous evening, stuck his head from the second story window.

"Whazza mazzer?" he demanded thickly. "I jush shot Bill Jones in the leg," replied the man below. "Shot Bill Jones in the leg!" repeated the doctor wonderingly. "Thash wha' I shaid," returned the offender-"shot Bill Jones in the leg."

The doctor gazed down upon him admiringly. "Well," he said, "that wash a hell of a good shot." And he closed the window and went back to bed.

The Hall of Fame.

Wait not for luck to draw the bolt Nor chance give up her key. The door that opened for the great Is open yet for thee.

Luck is a sleepy sentine! And Chance a fickle light.

Many a man hath passed them both

And entered in the night.

Have little care if neither heed Thy clamor, call or din.

And let thine own self in: -Aloysius Coll.

Charles Mathews, the famous English actor, once indulged in his talent for mimicry to his own misfortune. Mr. Tattersall, the well known auctioneer, was conducting a sale of blooded stock. "The first lot, gentlemen," said Mr. Tattersall, "is a bay filly by Smolensko." "The first lot, gentlemen," echoed

Mr. Mathews in the same tone of voice, "is a bay filly by Smolensko." The auctioneer looked somewhat annoyed, but proceeded. "Well, what shall we begin with?" "Well, what shall we begin with?"

replied the echo. Still endeavoring to conceal his vexation, Mr. Tattersall called out, "One bundred guineas?"

"One hundred guineas?" echoed Mathews

"Thank you, sir," cried Mr. Tattersall, bringing down the hammer with a bang, "the filly is yours!"

A lady and a fittle boy entered the car, but the boy squirmed and fidgeted so much on his seat that at last one of the other passengers expostulated:

Pat Finnigan had been summoned to-jury duty. Coming downstairs one morning dressed in his Sunday clothes, his wife looked at him and said:

"Where are you going, Pat?" He replied, "I'm going to coort." "H'm!" said the wife, and Pat stalked out. Next morning Pat came downstairs all shaved and shorn, with the Worse Than the Third Degree. A married man ran away with a silly young girl, and after an exciting chase the clopers were finally captired and returned to their homes. Feeling in the town ran high against the man, and a number of neighbors were sitting together one evening discussing the case. Naturally every-body had an idea of his own as to what action should be taken against the married man. One suggested jall for life, another said ninety years in the penitentiary would do, and a third offered tar and feathers. A little man who sat in the corner looked up and smiled. "I have a scheme," he remarked, "that beats all of yours a mile."

"What would you do with him?" the chorus asked.

"I would turn him over to his wife's mother," said the quiet little man .-Philadelphia Telegraph.

A Writer In the Wrong Pew.

When James Payn was editor of the Cornhill Magazine his private office was invaded one day by an unan-nounced visitor who had managed to er's hair was long, and his clothes were shabby and untidy. He had a roll of paper in his hand. Payn, surmising a poet and an epic several thousand lines long, looked up. "Well, sir?"

"I've brought you something about sarcoma and carcinoma."

"We are overcrowded with poetrycouldn't accept another line, not if it were by Milton." "Poetry!" the caller flashed. "Do you know anything about sarcoma and carcinoma?" "Italian lovers, aren't they?" said Payn imperturbably.

The caller retreated with a withering glance at the editor. Under the same roof as the Cornhill was the office of a medical and surgical journal, and it was this that the caller sought for the disposal of a treatise on those cancerous growths with the euphonious names which, with a layman's ignorance. Payn ascribed to poetry.-McClure's.

An Eye Out.

Dispute over a cab fare in London gave Henry Herman, the dramatist, opportunity for playing a grim joke at the driver's expense. Herman was the unfortunate possessor of a glass eye. which, on Jehu's waxing demonstrative with his whip, whereof the lash passed perilously near, he suddenly pulled out and thrust in cabby's "You rascal," he vociferated, "look what you've done! Nature Fakers of Fame. Fancy and imagination are at a discount, and our young Gradgrinds want strict facts. It was different years ago, when boys delighted in "The Island Home," even though the author of that desert island story made the albatross come up from the depths of the sea, a beautiful glittering creature with fins and scales, and described a battle royal between a sperm whale and a thrashing shark and swordfish. Again, how popular was "The Swiss Family Robinson," in spite of the fact that in their wonderful Island were found a lion, a polar bear and a kangaroo, and the whole family, though armed with guns, were blockaded for days by a bea constrictor.-London Outlook.

THE POKER.

Hardly Changed Since the Days of the Early Metal Workers.

As the first fireplace was a circle of stones at the mouth of a cave, so the evade the porter downstairs. The call- first poker was a piece of green stick. It was necessary to have something to knock the logs together with when they began to burn through the middle, and as primitive man did not wear boots he could not use them to kick the hot embers into place, as some of us do to this day. That was a refinement, if it can be so called, which came later. The green stick lasted until the age of iron and was then superseded by a handy piece of metal which possessed the advantage of being stronger and of not burning away. But since the days of the early workers in metal we have made no advance.

The poker has hardly, if at all, changed through the ages. It is, as it always has been, simple and severe of outline. It lends itself to no vagaries and to little ornamentation. It is one of the few things which no one has ever patented, because it may be said to have leaped from the first foundry perfect and complete in every respect. The only notable attempt at improvement has been to make the poker of brass with a twisted column, but even then the iron poker lurks at the side and is known as the curate, because it does all the rough work. The ornamental poker is not a poker at all, but a sham, an upstart masquerading under an ancient and honored name and gaining credit for duties which it is unable to perform.-London Globe.

A GREAT BATTLE.

The One Known In History as the "Victory of Victories."

The battle which is known in history as the "Victory of Victories" took place at Nehavend, in Ecbatana, and was fought between the new Moslem power in 637 and the empire of Persia, then one of the most powerful of the eastern monarchies. It was one of The girl with the soft, appealing the most absolutely decisive battles in eyes looked up at the tall, broad the history of war, and it was all the more amazing by reason of the fact ering about her with a protecting air, that it was won by a people who having just won her from a hated twenty years before had been unknown barbarians, lost in the deserts of Arabia.

Arabian historians place the Persian loss in a single day at 100,000 men jealous again, I've brought you to se- killed. This may be and probably is lect a tie for-for-anyway, you will, an exaggeration, but the fact remains won't you? A man's taste is so cor- that the Persian dynasty came to an end when the battle was over and that Zoroastrianism, which had been the religion of Persia for over a thousand years, was at once supplanted by Islam. Its modern representatives, as is well known, are now the Parsees of India.

The victory was so absolutely de cisive that it extended the Arabian dominious over the whole of the region lying between the Caspian sea and the Indian ocean. With the exception perhaps of the battle of Tours, no single later slipped it into her companion's fight ever made such a difference in the after history of the world.

"Well," he replied slowly, "I was thinking of Wilmer when I spoke. He had an ideal woman that he was always talking about when he was in college. She was tall and stately in his dreams, and he seemed to have no place in his heart for a small woman, and yet-and yet"-

"Well?" "Why, he finally married a little thing who hardly comes to his shoul-der. I wonder why it was."

"Perhaps, Fred," she said very slowly and distinctly, "he is like the majority of other men and was afraid to take any one of his size." He changed the subject.

A Shocking Tree.

There is a peculiar tree in the forests of central India which has most curious characteristics. The leaves of the tree are of a highly sensitive nalings fancled a fast trotting mare ture and so full of electricity that whoever touches one of them receives an electric shock. It has a very singupersuaded his mother to advance him lar effect upon a magnetic needle and will influence it at a distance of even seventy feet.
