PLEASANT AT FIRST.

But the New Arrival Realized at Last Just Where She Was.

A modern lady died and went to hades. His majesty met her deferentially at the gate.

"Will it be possible for me to secure an establishment here?" she said.

"Certainly, madam."

"In a desirable location?"

"I think so."

"I don't care to be near the riffraff, and I should like to be sure to get suitable servants."

"You should experience no difficulty. There are several good agencies."

"I could give dinner parties when I liked?"

"Dear me, yes."

"And make a splurge at it?"

"Oh, certainly."

"I should expect to spend my summers abroad."

"Quite right. Return tickets free."

"You have operas?"

"Several, devoted to the haut ton."

The lady lifted her lorgnette. She smiled slightly.

"Do you know," she said, "I am agreeably surprised. I was afraid this place was not kept up to conform to the best standards. It troubled me to think I might possibly have to associate with my inferiors. I am glad to see that you have such sense of the fitness of things. I am very glad to have renewed our brief acquaintance made on earth, and I will trouble you to see that my arrival is chronicled in the society columns of the papers."

His majesty bowed respectfully.

"Sorry, madam, but that will be impossible."

She gazed at him haughtily.

"How is that?" she asked sternly.

"There are no papers here; there are no society columns. No matter what you are doing, the public is in absolute ignorance of it."

And, sinking back, she muttered softly to herself:

"This is indeed hell!"—Life.

A PLEASANT REMARK.

It Was the Only One the Crank Made During the Game.

At a whist club in Brooklyn was an old fellow who enjoyed the reputation of being a great crank, and his inadvertent remarks against his partners were so severe and his manners generally so bad that it was rare, indeed, that he could get any one to play with him.

One night, however, a man happened in from the west, and the avoided one promptly assailed him with a request to "sit in." The western man was about to comply when he was quietly taken aside by one of the members of the club, who told him the reputation of the crank.

"I don't care," he said. "I can stand it, I guess."

At the end of the evening he was approached once more by the curious member.

"Well," said the member, "how did you manage?"

"First rate."

"Didn't he insult you?"

"Why, no."

"Didn't he browbeat you?"

"Not at all."

"Didn't he say anything?"

"Nothing special. He only spoke once during the whole course of the game."

"What did he say then?"

"Why, I didn't get the cards out right in the last round, and he looked over at me very pleasantly and said, 'Why, you can't even deal, can you?'"

Life.

A Tory's "Tip."

A good story is told of the times of the first reform bill in England, when the popular cry was "The bill, the whole bill and nothing but the bill."

In those days the various hostleries along the coaching roads were patronized according to the political leanings of the landlord. One night a Tory arrived at a certain inn and found to

MORAL COURAGE.

Moral courage is more worth having than physical courage. It is more worth having not only because it is a higher virtue, but because the demand for it is more constant. Physical courage is a virtue which is almost always put away in the lumber room. Moral courage is a virtue that is wanted day by day.—Charles Buxton.

Lotteries.

Lotteries are almost as old as history itself. It is certain that they were known to the Greeks and Romans, and the custom descended, through Italy, to modern times. In the Italian republics of the sixteenth century the lottery principle was applied to encourage the sale of merchandise, the lotto of Florence and that of Venice being well known. The first lotteries in France were licensed in 1656 by Francis I. In England the earliest lotteries sanctioned by the government were for such purposes as the repair of harbors and docks, about 1669. By the Virginia company of 1612 the lottery was brought to America.—New York American.

Boy's Apt Reply.

"One of the prettiest compliments I have ever had paid to me," said Mme. Melba, "was at one of the smaller Australian towns—Mount Morgan by name. Two little boys were unable to gain admission to the hall, and I let them come in and sit behind the orchestra. At the end of the concert I told them that they owed me a guinea apiece. The older of the two rose to his feet, saluted, and said: 'Madame, we owe you much more than that.' Don't you think that was a great compliment?" said Mme. Melba.

Hatmaking.

The history of hatmaking in the United States dates back to very early colonial days. In 1662 the assembly of Virginia enacted a law offering ten pounds of tobacco for every good wool or fur hat made in the colony. Delaware in 1753 offered a prize of 40 shillings for the neatest and best hat manufactured in the lower counties. Soon after the close of the Revolution the manufacture of hats had become of great importance in Pennsylvania, and from that time the industry has continued to flourish.

Wooden Water Tanks.

Cypress water tanks have been known to last for a quarter of a century and white pine ones two decades.

Misunderstanding.

"He's Argus eyed."

"Can't an oculist help him?"—New York Press.

Gales.

The average number of gales that sweep the world in a year is about sixty-six.

THE TURNING POINT.

In all lives, the highest and humblest, there is a crisis in the formation of character and in the vent of disposition. It comes from many sources and from some which on the surface are apparently trivial. It may be a book, a speech, a sermon, a great misfortune or a burst of prosperity. But the result is the same—a sudden revelation to ourselves of our secret purpose and a recognition of our perhaps long shadowed but now masterful convictions.

The Limitations of Science.

Johnny was sent to study mathematics, and the teacher told him that it was a true science.

"For instance," she said, "if it takes one man twelve days to build a house, then twelve men can build it in one day."

Johnny replied: "And 288 men will build it in an hour, 17,280 in a minute, 1,036,800 men will put it up in a second. Now, I don't believe they could build even a single brick in that time. Again, if one ship can cross the Atlantic in twelve days, twelve ships should be able to cross it in one day. I don't believe that either, so I'm not going to study mathematics." And Johnny left the teacher studying it herself.—Exchange.

Defining an Art Patron.

"Is your husband so very fond of art?"

"Art! He doesn't know a Raphael from a haircut."

"Why, I understood him to say that he was an art patron."

"Patron! That man wouldn't trade a club sandwich for a Bouguereau! What does he mean by calling himself an art patron?"

"Why, he says it costs him ten thousand a year to pay for the bogus masters the smooth dealers coax you to buy—and that makes him an art patron."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Stationer. "Stationery" has etymologically as much to do with standing as has "stationary." The original stationers, or stationarii, were so called because they sold their books upon stalls or "stations"—in London round about old St. Paul's cathedral. In some cases against the walls of the cathedral itself. This is one of many trades the names of which have no direct allusion to the commodities sold. "Grocers," for instance, were so called either because they sold "ten gros," wholesale, or because they were "engrossers," monopoly holders.—London Chronicle.

Saving. The true basis of economies is that laid down by Mr. Mowbray. If you spend sixpence a year more than your income, you are miserable; if sixpence less, the result is happiness. This is entirely too simple for most persons. They run into debt gleefully and have a hard time getting out. If there were a modern Ben Franklin who could wield the proportionate influence that the sage did in his own day, he would be the greatest of Americans. Spend less than you earn and buy nothing because it is cheap.—Exchange.

How to See Under Water. A lens for seeing under water is described as producing an effect which is both astonishing and delightful. It gives distinct vision to objects from twenty to thirty feet below the surface which are usually out of ordinary eye range. The eye's loss of extending vision when under water is owing to the fact that an entirely different focus is required. The spectacles which can adjust this focus are made by putting two watch crystals back to back or with the concavities outward. Try it and be surprised.

Not at All Angry. Dorothy—I'm afraid papa was angry when you asked him for me, wasn't he, Jack, dear? Jack—Not at all. He asked if I knew any more respectable young men who would be likely to marry your five sisters if properly coaxed.
