INDIAN SUSIE
DIES OF OLD AGE

"One-Eyed Susie," as she has always been known, perhaps the oldest Indian squaw in this community, died Thursday and was buried Friday in the cemetery at Underwood, Wash. It is believed that she was nearly 100 years old.

Susie was a member of the Yakima tribe and recently received $800 as her portion of the sale of Indian lands. She was brought to this locality by Indian George, from whom she separated more than 30 years ago, after a battle with another squaw over his affections.

Susie used to do washing for the early pioneers and for a number of years was a domestic in the home of E. L. Smith. On account of her advanced age she was kept by the charitable for a number of years. Hood River women made her last days comfortable and a number of them attended the funeral services.

TWO MEET DEATH IN FIRE AT DALLES

Edwin C. Chesebro, vice-president and treasurer of the Chesebro Investment Co., one of the most prominent real estate men of The Dalles, and Mrs. Nita Derry, a woman of the underworld, were burned to death in a fire which destroyed a resort in the tenderloin district at an early hour Wednesday morning. The building, owned by the Michelbach estate, was damaged beyond repair. The loss to the old wooden structure and its furnishings is estimated at $2500. Neither the structure nor the furniture was insured.

Chesebro was well known at Hood River and was a son of the man of that name who came here to take charge of the affairs of Phil Boyd who committed suicide.

Chris Anderson, the first fireman to reach the burning building, gives the following account of the disaster:

"I did not know there was a man inside, being told that all had escaped, and we devoted our attention principally to preventing the spreading of the flames to other buildings. It must have been after 4 o'clock when the alarm was sounded that one of the girls who lived in the house had not escaped. There was no possible chance then of getting in as the flames were too fierce."

"I saw Mr. Chesebro go up on the porch and someone yelled, 'Don't go in there.' As I said, rescue was utterly impossible, and we paid no more attention to Mr. Chesebro for we never imagined he would enter. After seeing him go up the steps and hearing the warning for him to come back I supposed he had not entered, but the porch was clouded with smoke and he undoubtedly went in the door when nobody saw him, due to the thick smoke."

"About 5 o'clock we were able to get in the house to look for the body of the woman and we were horrified to find the remains of Mr. Chesebro. His body was in one corner and the bed was to the other side of the room. He probably was overcome by the smoke in his search for the woman and dropped to the floor after losing consciousness."

"The body of the girl was on the floor with the head stuck between the iron rounds of the foot frame of the bed. That may be the reason why she could not escape. Most of the clothing was burned off Mr. Chesebro, and all from the woman's body, the flesh of which was also badly burned. The faces of both friends were beyond recognition."

THREE TIMES

Failing in an attempt to commit suicide Wednesday at The Dalles when he fired a bullet into his side and finding, as he later told the attending physician, that it did not hurt badly, The Dalles Chronicle says that Sid Dawson placed his 32-calibre revolver against his forehead and fired again, but the second effort to end his life was a failure as the bullet flattened against and made no indentation in the skull.

The would-be dead man plucked the bullet out of his forehead, himself and threw it away. The young man then took what he supposed to be morphine tablets, in order to finish the job, but the third attempt was, like the others, fruitless, for the tablets were those prepared for persons suffering with headache. After being removed to the hospital Dawson said: "I made a poor job of it this time, but hope to do better next time." He will probably recover.

Dawson, who is 22 years old, came west a few weeks ago and lived with a family named Harriman near the Sixth street bridge. He said that he has been in poor health for some time, being unable to find work. He was despondent due to the fact that he had no money with which to return to his folk in the east, and as he did not want to be a burden to his friends he had decided to take his life.

MARRIED

CORY-CLARK

A quiet wedding took place in the Hotel Oregon Wednesday afternoon when Frank S. Cory and Miss Etta May Clark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Clark of the east side were married in the presence of a few intimate friends and relatives.

Earl Cory, brother of the groom, was best man, and Hazel Clark, a sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. The ceremony, which was performed in the parlor of the hotel, was conducted by Rev. J. G. Tate and was with a ring.

After congratulations and best wishes Mr. and Mrs. Cory took the afternoon train for Portland. Later they went to White Salmon, where they will make their home and where Mr. Cory is a successful carpenter.
