The largest orchard land deal of the year was consummated Monday by the purchase by H. F. Davidson of 140 acres in the Willow Flat district belonging to Burt Van Horn.

MERRY MAKERS TO OPEN FOR WEEK

McKenzie's Merry Makers, who have played at Hood River frequently and given their audiences satisfaction, announce a week's return engagement, commencing Sunday, July 9th, at the Monroe Opera House.

INDIAN BERRY PICKERS STRIKE IN UPPER VALLEY

A strike among the Indian berry pickers, who have been harvesting the berry crop in the upper valley, is an instance of the laborers' quitting work because they were too prosperous.

When Mr. Miller asked what the trouble was, he was told by Chief Joseph Stayth, who has in charge the large party of Indians working there, that they wanted to spend some of their money.

As the upper valley berry crop is now at its height, the refusal of the Indians to work may cause a big loss to Mr. Miller.

Dined at Jewett's

A party of Eastern people, who have recently become residents of Hood River or expect to, went across the river to White Salmon for a little outing on the Fourth. They took dinner at the country home of the Jewett's and afterward did a little sight-seeing.

Invitations are out for a dance which will be given by E. R. Pooley and H. C. Peters at Bellbronner Hall Friday evening, July 14th.

The dance is being given in honor of house guests of the entertainers and is being looked forward to with pleasurable anticipation by many of the valley and city's young folks.

A number of the valley's younger set were very enjoyably entertained Saturday night at the residence of Mrs. Pooley, who is occupying the Batchelder bungalow for the summer, at a birthday party given in honor of Dick Pooley.

Mrs. Kanaga gave a luncheon Friday in honor of Miss Joynea, of Washington, D. C., who is the house guest of Mrs. J. W. Crites. Covers for eight were laid and the place cards were miniature tents with United States flags. Imprinted on them were the words, "None but the brave deserve the fair".

BAD STORM STOPS MOUNTAIN CLIMBERS

The large party of Hood River people who left here early Sunday morning to climb Mt. Adams under the management of C. L. Wheeler failed to get to the top of the mountain, but report an interesting trip.

The party which numbered thirty failed to reach the summit of the mountain owing to a severe storm which came up Monday while it was enroute. The climbers according to their guides got to an elevation of 10,000 feet and made the descent under difficulties.

Stanley Sorrenson and J. W. Pifer lost the trail on the way down and caused some uneasiness until they were located by Jack Suthoff and Frank VanDyke.

The party on leaving Hood River reached Glenwood Sunday morning where 50 horses were ready for them and got to their camp at the snow line Sunday afternoon. They slept on the snow that night and the next morning started the ascent, getting back to camp at 1:30 Monday afternoon and returning to Glenwood Tuesday they started on the home trip.

LIGHT AND POWER MAY CAUSE SCRAP

The announcement of reductions in light and power rates by the Pacific Light and Power Company has caused the Hydro Electric Company to push its solicitation of contracts, and representatives of the organization claim that they have secured many prospective patrons.

MASTER OF GRANGE ENTERS ROAD TILT

Hood River, Ore., July 3, 1911. Editor News—Your interview with the county court as published in your last week's issue, is very unfair and misleading.

Without going into details allow me to state some facts. There have been two well attended mass meetings held in our Grange Hall during the last month. These meetings were not called by the Grange, but many loyal grangers were in attendance. At least two-thirds of those attending were not grangers.

At each meeting a committee of five was appointed to wait upon the county court. Of these ten legal voters three were grangers and seven were not. There is no one on the East side opposed to the building of good roads, but many of us are asking to have better material used for the building of roads than that which is now being used west of Van Horn station.

We also asked that the road bed be placed in the center between fences, and not follow the thirty-year-old cow trail. If for asking this we are to be misrepresented and criticised then allow me to state we have no apologies to offer.

J. H. Mohr, Master Pine Grove Grange.

company secures the required number, it is said that the work of building a power dam and plant will be commenced.

The announcement of the reduction in rates has injected a new feature into the light and power situation, and the outcome of the competition for business between the two companies is being watched with interest.

Accompanied by the local members of the organization, a class of 17 citizens of this city and Valley was escorted to The Dalles Thursday night, where they were initiated by the Cherry City Chapter of Elks. The party left here on the local train, aboard a special car.

Mrs. E. H. Shepard went to Portland Saturday to attend the wedding of her sister, Miss Præstine Falling, to Horatio Elwin Smith, Monday at Trinity Episcopal church.

Mrs. Ireland entertained 50 of the congregational church ladies very enjoyably at luncheon at her country home Friday. The large party went to Mrs. Ireland's in automobiles and carriages.

Master Arthur Loftis entertained the boy scouts Friday afternoon, the occasion being his birthday. The boys, after paying their respects to the host, did justice to a generous luncheon.

Mrs. Bob Carter entertained at bridge at her home on Cascade avenue Saturday afternoon. The home of Mrs. Carter was prettily decorated for the affair, which was concluded with a sumptuous luncheon.

Mrs. D. D. Firebaugh entertained at cards at her residence on Hazel avenue Monday afternoon. Seven tables were put in play. The decorations were English ivy and roses.

The fortunate ones were Mrs. H. L. Dumble, who took first favors, and Mrs. A. A. Jayne, who received second. An elaborate luncheon was served.

JUMPED HIS BAIL BUT ARRESTED HERE

C. A. Rowland charged with securing forged names to street paving petitions in Portland was arrested here Saturday by officer Lewis on an order from Sheriff Bob Stevens for attempting to jump his bail.

Rowlands who had been indicted by the grand jury had been released from jail on a bond of $1,500 supplied by a friend of his mother, who is a widow. His bondsman is a real estate man named Mitchell. The latter discovered that Rowland had left the city on the Bailey Gatzert and notified Sheriff Stevens. Mitchell was deputized to take Rowland into custody and came here and took him back to Portland Sunday morning.

FLOATING SALOON SUPPLIES THIRSTY

A floating saloon is said to have tied up at the wharf Friday night until it was loaded with thirsty residents, when it made for the deep water, where sales of liquid refreshments were made beyond the reach of the authorities.

The houseboat which contained a number of women in addition to its supply of liquor is said to have made several trips from the river to the dock.

Who owns the floating resort, no one here seems to know. Local authorities assert that they will be ready to meet its management with a warm reception on the vessel's next arrival.
