Developing The West
The people of the West, regardless of locality, are united upon one point; they want the natural resources of the West developed and people put upon the undeveloped lands. The object of the Public Lands Convention to be held in Denver September 28-30, is for the purpose of agreeing upon a policy to bring about that result. The future policy of the government in the administration of the public domain depends upon Congress. The West has the balance of power in Congress if it can agree upon a policy and work unitedly for it regardless of party political lines. The meeting promises to be the most important ever held in the West.

NORTHWEST NOTES

James J. Hill, Judge Robert S. Lovett, Louis W. Hill, Howard Elliott, and other railroad men of prominence throughout the country are expected to attend the sessions of the convention. The lines they represent are paying more attention than ever before to the Pacific Northwest and what they have to say will be listened to with interest by people of this state.

Advices reaching the office of Secretary C. C. Chapman, of the League, indicate there will be a large attendance. Commercial bodies so far heard from intend to send big delegations. The fact that the Astoria Centennial celebration will be in progress at the same time will undoubtedly add to the attendance.

Believing the women of the state have a direct interest in better roads, the Mothers' Congress, which is a branch of the national organization, has identified itself with the movement and Mrs. George Gerlinger, of Dallas, head of the Good Roads and Rural Schools committee, has taken steps to have the school children aid in the work. Boys are expected to report road conditions to the proper authorities and if the rising generation can be interested in highway improvement, it is thought the future will provide better roads.

The Oregon family of commercial bodies will have a big reunion August 14, 15, and 16 at Astoria, when the annual convention of the Oregon Development League will be held. The program, as arranged tentatively, includes a large number of the most prominent publicity men of the country. Notable addresses are scheduled that deal with the various phases of community building, and a big impetus will be given to the development movement now so strongly under way throughout the state.

Oregon may soon have a silk industry. A colony of Italians will settle in Wasco county next month and the immigrants expect to raise mulberry trees for silk worms. The newcomers are said to be experienced in this industry in their own country and they find on investigation that Oregon is suited to the growth of the industrious worm and the manufacture of its gossamer fibre.

Secretary of the Interior Fisher will visit Oregon next month, inspecting the reclamation projects under way here. He will learn of conditions prevailing in respect to forest reserves, vacant government lands and the other matters under his control. He will also visit other Pacific Coast sections and Alaska. British Columbia is interested in opening the Columbia River to navigation as far as Ravelstoke, B. C., and then on to Lake Windemere, not far from the source of that stream. Oregon and Washington are aiding to make the river navigable from its mouth to the Canadian border.

MOUNTAIN MOVING NEAR STEVENSON

A story in the Journal gives evidence that the Indian legend of a natural bridge across the Columbia River from Stevenson to Cascade Locks has some foundation of fact apparently. The story is as follows: The old legend of the Bridge of Gods is developing into a reality. The Indians of old always contended that at one time "many moons ago" the Columbia passed through a subterranean passage, just below where the town of Stevenson is now located. This has always been considered a myth by the white man. About two years ago the people living near Red Bluff, two miles north of Stevenson, reported a small crevice making its appearance in the mountain. This has widened out in the last two years from a couple of feet to 200 feet, and in places is several hundred feet deep. This opening is over two and a half miles and passes beyond the place where the Bridge of Gods was supposed to have been located. A house located at the base of the mountain has been shifted from its original position in a slow form of locomotion, fences covered, springs that have always given a flow have dried up and new springs in different locations have made their appearance with an abundance of cold mineral waters. A small island has made its appearance in the Gorge lake, growing from a small speck to a space of 20 to 30 feet. The general topography of that part of the country is undergoing a complete change and the Bridge of Gods may become a matter of history instead of a myth. The rapids are becoming more rugged every year, and it will only be a matter of time when navigation will close at low water below the locks, unless the channel is blasted out.

MOSIER MERCHANTS PLAN ALL-YEAR BOAT LANDING

The merchants of Mosier are working on a scheme to get the river boats to build a landing at that point. There is an excellent place for a dock just west of the railroad station and a crossing has been granted by the O. W. R. & N. With the river transportation facilities Mosier will enjoy better service than at present and expects to get lower freight rates.
