MRS. JAYNE DROPS DEAD IN PORTLAND

Residents of Hood River sustained a severe shock Monday when the news reached this city of the death of Mrs. A. A. Jayne, who died suddenly in Portland from heart trouble. An account of the sad event in the Oregonian says:

"Stricken with heart disease while on a St. Johns car coming into Portland last night, Mrs. Jayne, wife of A. A. Jayne, of Hood River, fell in a faint on the floor of the car and expired shortly afterward at a drug-store, where she was taken.

"Mrs. Jayne had been complaining of feeling ill earlier in the evening. She had been suffering from heart disease for some time and valvular affections had become chronic.

"When it was noticed by passengers that Mrs. Jayne had fallen in her seat, the car, which had traveled several blocks past the place where she became ill, was stopped at Union avenue and Russell street, and she was taken into the Russell drug store. Strong restoratives were applied, but she expired shortly after being carried from the car.

"Mrs. Jayne was 43 years old. Dr. Yielding, who attended her, pronounced the cause of death valvular affection of the heart."

Mr. and Mrs. Jayne last week left Hood River, intending to make their home in Los Angeles.

Before going south they were stopping a few days in Portland. While known to be far from well, it was not thought that Mrs. Jayne had any organic trouble.

Funeral services were held in Portland yesterday afternoon, conducted by Rev. Edward True Simpson, pastor of St. Mark's Episcopal church of this city, of which Mrs. Jayne had been an active and devout member. The services were attended by a large party of Hood River people, who went to Portland Tuesday morning. Burial took place in Portland.
