This year our agents found that they were unable to compete in many markets owing to the fact that Wenatchee valley fruit was being freely offered in these markets at a less figure than we would accept. This simple statement should help to show that some of our fruit in this valley is being needlessly slaughtered. Sometimes it looks as though some of our fruit growers didn't want the full value of their product. So with the fruit of other sections.

"The other scheme, known as the Clark scheme, laid before the growers—and mind you it is only as yet a scheme—is roughly that we, the growers of the Wenatchee valley, refuse to have anything to do with the neighboring sections; that we isolate ourselves and defy all competition. While talking cooperation we absolutely refuse to cooperate. Verily in this we are like the ostrich who buries his head in the ground and imagines that because he can see no one, no one can see him. Attempting to avoid competition we are asked to place ourselves in direct competition with all the other fruit growing sections."

Queen Ants.
The queen ant has apparently not had justice done to her by naturalists. Dr. W. M. Wheeler's view is that by comparison with the queen bee the queen ant is by far the more admirable creature. In many important respects they are diametrically opposite. The queen bee is, it is pointed out, a degenerate creature, unable to nourish either herself or her young, to visit flowers, to build combs or to store them with honey. With the queen ant quite the reverse is the case. She is held to be a perfect exemplar and embodiment of her species, and the worker ants suffer from incomplete and retarded development. The queen ant is a very industrious and intelligent worker. She forms an exceedingly interesting subject for study.—London Globe.

Odd Signs.
Placard at a moving picture show: "Young children must have parents."
In a barber's shop window: "During alterations patrons will be shaved in the back."
In a tailor's shop: "We dye for others. Why not let us dye for you?"
In a clothing store: "These pants will look better on your legs than on our hands."
A silversmith has a place next door to a restaurant. The former having put up a placard, "Jewelry of all kinds plated." the restaurant keeper followed with this: "Orsters and little neck clams plated."—Boston Transcript.

Dodging the Dun.
"Why did you come way downtown to buy this when you could have bought it from your neighbor?"
"I've exhausted my credit with him, and if I went in there and paid cash for something he'd think I have money and start to dun me."—Detroit Free Press.

SALE OF ALCOHOL IS SAFEGUARDED

During its brief session last week the grand jury conferred with the physicians and druggists of the city with a view to further safeguarding the sale of intoxicants. It was the desire of the grand jury to prevent the sale of alcohol to persons not actually in need of stimulants for medicinal purposes. As a result of the conference it was decided that the use of separate prescription slips by all physicians will hereafter be insisted upon. Upon blanks furnished for this purpose, the doctor must state that he has examined the patient and found that he is in need of alcoholic stimulants. These blanks were formerly used by the local physicians, but for some time their use has been discontinued.

The grand jury returned only one indictment. This was against Chas. E. Bailey, who forged a check while intoxicated. As he promised to abstain, he was paroled on good behavior.

After the two-days' session the grand jury reported that the greater portion of its time had been taken up in original investigation and that in their belief, they had accomplished results which will be for the moral benefit of the community. As far as the county offices were concerned, they made the usual examinations and found the various offices systematically conducted.

The report was signed by the grand jurors as follows: A. C. King, foreman, H. M. Huxley, Peter Saitzman, J. K. Sosey, Charles W. Reed, F. E. Newby and O. H. Baker.

THE LOST SPECTACLES.

What Happened When the Old Gentleman Tried to Find Them.

A man from "up state" who was in New York city on business was taken by a nephew whom he was visiting to dine at a Broadway restaurant the evening of his arrival. The next day he said to the younger man:

"Where is that restaurant we dined at last night? I left my gold spectacles there. I'm pretty sure. I've got another pair with me, but I don't want to lose the others."

"I'll stop in and get them for you on my way down town," replied the nephew.

He went to the restaurant, explained the circumstances and received a pair of gold rimmed spectacles that had been left on a table the previous evening. On his return home in the afternoon he handed them to his uncle.

"Where in thunder did you get those?" inquired the elder man. "I was going down Broadway today and recognized the place we dined at—at least I thought I did. Anyway I went in and asked if I left my spectacles last night, and they gave me this pair." He produced another pair of gold rimmed spectacles.

Upon the uncle describing the restaurant whence he had retrieved the glasses the nephew assured him it was several blocks from the one they had patronized the day before. While the two were discussing the situation the postman delivered a package for the uncle. It contained a pair of gold rimmed spectacles, with a note from his wife saying that she had found them on his writing desk at home and was sending them to New York in the event that he might need them.—New York Herald.

MOROCCO CITY.

Magnificent in its Site and in its Historic Ruins.

Morocco city, the capital of the southern half of the Moroccan kingdom, is a far more interesting city than Fez. Architecturally its monuments, including the famous Kutubia tower, the counterpart of the Giralda in Seville; the famous mosque of Muley Abdallah and a hundred other ruined or semi-ruined edifices surviving from the days when the city had 700,000 inhabitants and was one of the great capitals of Islam, are the most considerable and magnificent in Morocco. Equally beautiful is the site of this city in the upper valley of the Teneziff river, surrounded in a half circle by the great wall of the grand Atlas mountains, whose snow-capped peaks are seen beyond a foreground of large farms and fertile fields.

A city far less given over to war, with a population less ferocious, less fanatical than that of Fez or Meknes, Morocco city has been much more frequently visited by Europeans than its northern rivals. Geographically Morocco city is the real gateway to the Sahara. By the Gawi pass one road climbs over the Atlas mountains to Taflet, and the caravan route continues to Timbuktu. A second road descends to the Draa, crossing the Atlas chain, while a third leads to Tarudant and the Sus country. Close communication with the south has left its mark upon the people, who are darker and show more patently the infusion of African blood than the Berbers and Arabs of the north.—London Standard.

THE WINTER EGG BASKET.
If all hens that don't lay winter eggs got the ax poultry population would take a big drop, but if these were treated by the simple method outlined here winter egg production would jump up high.

"The Winter Egg Problem" caps an article in a poultry journal. There is no problem. The hen, the man and the management do the trick, unless it's a woman, and she's more sick. Keep pullets for big winter egg records. They lay double the eggs three and four year olds do at less expense. Don't crowd layers. It means bad air, more vermin, sweating, dirty quarters, lack of exercise and eggs. Hens are pushed out into the snow and wind, and that means roup. Crowded hens cannot feed evenly, and a crowded, badly ventilated house means loafers and frosty walls. A clean, cozy, roomy roost, a roomy scratch floor or shed, where hens may scratch their grain out of dry litter, are big items in producing hen fruit.

Hens must have exercise to keep healthy and lay. Without it they turn to fat, become weaklings and "eat their heads off."

By exercise they help to keep themselves warm and thus save feed; by exercise they lay high priced eggs and pay their feed bills and a profit. If your hens do not lay feel them for fat, and if you find that big bustle in the rear turn them on to a scratch floor. Feed them little, but make them scratch, scratch, scratch, and you'll soon get eggs. Sunshine and air without drafts are essential, as are also a dust bath, charcoal, grit, shell and plenty of fresh water.

A house where water freezes solid is too cold, and feed is only burned up for body warmth. A curtain dropped before the roost at night prevents frosted combs and a setback in egg production.

A concrete floor is lasting, dry and sanitary. Dropping boards are necessary to save droppings and make daily cleaning easy. Deep, clean wheat straw is best litter, and nests on the floor with opening toward wall are most practical, while low roosts on a level, are best style.

WINTER EGG RATION.

For breakfast the night before throw a big handful of equal parts wheat, oats and corn for each hen into deep litter to be scratched for till 10 o'clock, when cabbage, beets, sprouted oats or sweet apples should be fed.

At noon give a short meal of cut bone sprinkled with bran, followed at 4 with a full mash made up as follows: Four parts bran, two parts ground oats, two parts wheat midds, two parts corameal, four parts alfalfa or clover meal, wet up with skim or buttermilk.

A full feed of whole corn hits the spot on a cold night.

DON'TS.

Don't burn the litter from the pens. It's very rash to make this ash when on the garden it makes ash.

Don't let young turkeys have new corn. New grain is oft a trouble maker and brings the rooster undertaker.

Don't neglect to lay in clover or alfalfa. It may seem strange to feed hens hay, but it's the stuff to make them lay.

Don't wait till winter to lay in supplies. The busy bee works while there's honey. Just copy him and save your money.

Don't expect hens that have been on range to do as well shut up unless you make up by care and feed what they lose by the change.

Don't feed moldy grain. A hungry hen may eat such rot, but in the morning may be not, while you who sought thus to save cash will find to feed old rot is rash.
