APPLE PUBLICITY URGED BY NEWELL

W. K. Newell, president of the Oregon State Board of Horticulture, urges a campaign of apple publicity. He says:

"I believe that apple growers must arrange some way to raise funds to advertise apples as a food product. But few people realize the actual food value or the medicinal value of apples. Baked apples ought to take the place of most so-called breakfast foods on the American breakfast table. Children ought to eat more apples between meals instead of candy. Lately I have taken notice of what people eat on dining cars. I have been travelling most of the time and lately covered about 8000 miles in three weeks. I have found that grape fruit is being eaten for breakfast more than all other fruits, and only two or three times on this trip have I seen anyone eating baked apples, grape fruit being eaten by dozens of persons on the cars every morning. This must be due in part, at least, to the advertising of grape fruit.

"The California Fruit Exchange spent $50,000 last year in advertising 'Sunkist' oranges, and will likely double this sum in 1912. Something must be done to secure better distribution of apples, but we must also increase consumption."

WOULD GIVE COUNTRY BACK TO THE INDIANS

Here is a story that was enjoyed by members of both parties in the House and Senate cloakrooms recently. It is related that a man called on his neighbor, armed with an imposing looking document. "Bill," said the caller, "I want you to sign this petition."

"What is it?" his friend asked, suspiciously. "Well," was the reply, "It now looks as if Roosevelt would be nominated at Chicago and Bryan would be named at Baltimore. This is a petition praying that the country be restored to the Indians."

TRIBUTE IS PAID LOCAL LIFESAVERS

The Oregonian commented editorially a day or two ago on the action of the three local Boy Scouts who saved a comrade from drowning last week. The editorial is, in part, as follows:

"Had the Boy Scouts of Hood River not been given the military training against which the Socialists and I. W. W. declaim, they could not have saved their comrade from drowning. That training prompted Stimpson to call on his companions to form a living chain when he found himself alone unable to rescue Buell and it prompted them to respond promptly. It had taught them exactly what to do when called upon for help and had taught them to do it quickly and efficiently without the loss of one precious second. Boy Scout training had instructed the boys what to do in order to expel the water from the drowning boys' lungs and to revive them after dragging them to shore.

"This incident is a practical demonstration that the Boy Scouts are not a military, but a peaceful organization. They apply what is useful in military training to the preservation instead of the destruction of life. They turn military training to peaceful, human uses."

TWO CHILDREN AT DUFUR NARROWLY ESCAPE DEATH

A double drowning was narrowly averted at Dufur the last of the week when a six-year-old boy fell into Fifteen Mile creek and was carried down stream by the current, as was also a girl of 12, who jumped into the stream after the boy.

Both were being carried by the swiftly-flowing stream when discovered by a picnic party. Miss Bertha Rehm and W. L. Tobie promptly went to their assistance and rescued the two children, who were exhausted. They were resuscitated after a time.

MEDALS ASKED FOR LOCAL BOY SCOUT LIFE-SAVERS

Scoutmaster Edmund Trew Stimpson, rector of St. Mark's Episcopal church, has written to the National commissioners of the organization asking for medals for the members of the local troop—Rodger Stimpson, Baird Stone and Edwin Sonnleshen—who saved the life of their fellow scout, Chester Buell, when he was drowning in the slough north of the city.
