MR. DABNEY WRITES OF TRIP ABROAD

Mayence, at the head of deep water navigation, is the center of the wine industry on the middle Rhine. It has a population of 115,000 people and its history, dating back more than 2,000 years. This place has much interest to the tourists and from it a visit can easily be made to Weisbaden and Frankfurt, both of which are interesting cities.

In going from Mayence to Heildeburg one passes through some interesting country with much market gardening which is mostly done by women, who work cows and oxen or a horse and cow, etc. A part of the way is through wild, weird and some dense forests.

Heildeburg has 50,000 people. It lies on both sides of the River Neckar, and two miles from its junction with the Rhine.

The Church of the Holy Ghost, dating back to 1400, is an interesting structure, and in it the Reformation began by preaching and administering Sacrament in both kinds, but in course of time a bitter strife arose between the two factions and a wall was built through, dividing the church in the center, the Roman Catholics using the choir and the Protestants the nave. The wall has been removed and replaced several times, and the last time it was rebuilt was in 1893. Thus the lion and the lamb lie down together in peace and worship God with a wall between them.

Heildeburg Castle is one of the largest and finest ruins in Germany, if not in Europe. It is located on a high hill overlooking the city, rivers, valleys and forests, and from it one can see in the distance the Harz Mountains, while further away the dim outline of the Vosges appears.

Heildeburg Castle.

The castle was built in the thirteenth century, of red or brown stone, and its many statues and ornamental carvings makes it very beautiful. The old well, 25 feet in circumference and nearly 100 feet deep, has the same careful workmanship; every stone is dressed and perfectly curved and fit so closely that one can hardly discern where one is joined to the other. Much of the castle was used as prison, and as I wander from one dark cell to another and look out through small iron grates secured in strong, thick walls, my mind drifts back to olden times, when prisoners sat around on the bare cold rock floor and "thinking, mother, dear, of you, and the bright and happy home so far away." There is a beautiful porch connected with the castle with portly winding walks and paths, and enclosed by a high stone wall.

Strassburg, dating back 1500 years before America was discovered, has a population of 150,000, and is the capital of Alsace and Lorraine, and is one of the best fortified cities in Europe. It is surrounded by fourteen forts with a garrison of 15,000 men, the beautiful country surrounding it is mostly taken up with market gardening.

There is a building covering several acres of ground where the markets are held two days in each week, and it was my pleasure to attend one of them, and it was interesting to see the peasants coming in from the different districts, each one in his own peculiar dress and mode of conveyance, which consisted of wagons and carts drawn by cows, oxen, a horse world. Its quaint stone and brick buildings are of much interest. The Cruciform Church, built in the fifteenth century is 400 feet in length and its interior is beautiful, and contains one of the largest pipe organs in the world, having nearly 5,000 pipes.

In going to Cologne we passed through a beautiful country in the way. This part of Germany lies in a higher altitude and the land is used more for agriculture, etc. Cologne is one of the attractive cities of Germany, situated on the River Rhine, and has a population of 400,000. It lies in a semi-circle with a broad boulevard beautified with various kinds of trees, shrubs and flowers encircling it.

The Cologne Cathedral.

The Cologne Cathedral is the largest and most costly building of its kind in Germany. The tower is more than 500 feet high and one may ascend nearly to its top by means of steps. The decorated windows are exceptionally fine. Its large bell, made from 22 French cannons, weighs 26 tons, and its mellow tone is most beautiful and may be heard for many miles.

Cologne dates back more than 2,000 years, and much of the old Roman wall and some of the massive towers may be seen. The Pontoon bridge, across the river, is composed of 36 steel boats and has been used for general traffic for many years. The railroad bridge is one of more than ordinary notice. It is so wide that it carries five railway and two street car tracks, besides two passageways each 12 feet, for footmen. We are now sailing up the winding River Rhine with its picturesque scenery all around and our next stop was made at Ronisz-winter, or Seven Mountains. This is a pretty summer resort, and two miles away, on the top of the nearest mountain, rests the old ruins of the Drachenfels Castle, and from it one is able to see many miles up and down the river. The Seven Mountains are mostly covered with woods of different kinds, with winding roads and driven a haven which is far away from their nativity, and it is interesting to ways leading to and past many beautiful mansions, hotels, etc.

Coblentz is 116 miles from Cologne, and in going that distance we passed many quaint old villages and towns, with vine-clad hills with beautiful country seats, castles and old castle ruins crowning the higher and more rocky ones. Coblentz is at the junction of the Moselle and Rhine Rivers, and one of the greatest wine centers in Germany, and is much noted for its fine Moselle wines. Near the city is the Stolzenfels Castle, built in the twelfth century. In going from Coblentz to Bingen one passes through a very rough country with hills and low mountains on each side of the river, with castle crownings and old ruins, some of which were nearly obscured by vine and foliage, and sloping back from the river the rock terraces contain thousands of acres of vineyards. Bingen is a quiet, quaint little city or eight or ten thousand people. It lies at the junction of the Rivers Rhine and Neckar, and across the latter there is a stone bridge built by the Romans 13 years B. C., and has been in constant use since that time. The people have their peculiar dress and habits, which adds interest to "Fair Bingen-on-the-Rhine." Busy Klopp, which is situated on a knoll near the center of the town, was erected on the enclosing walls of a Roman fort and from it one can get a magnificent view. The Parish church was built nearly 1000 years before America was discovered, and is of much interest. As we go up the one side of their person from head to foot, and on the other side they wear black; then another will use some other colors, and so on, and in all it makes quite an interesting spectacle. The Queen's Palace is large and handsomely finished and the large structure rests on 14,000 piles. Here, as in other Holland cities, the castles of the ladies are designated on the streets by the rich ones wearing a gold cap with a thin lace over it on her head; the next in wealth wears the silver cap, and the poor, by the clumsy wooden shoes on their feet.

A trip to Amsterdam would not be complete without making some neighboring excursions and visiting some of the so-called dead cities around Zuiderzee. Consequently, our next place of interest was at Marken, a fishing village of nearly 1,500 people, located on a low, flat island several miles square, bounded by the Zuiderzee and the North Sea. The people are of that same peculiar dress and habits of the old Dutch Hollanders of long ago. They all wear the clumsy wooden shoes. The men and boys, with pants legs larger than the hobble skirt. The women and girls with skirts proportionally as large, with waists like Joseph's coat of many colors, and each one with a curly lock hanging down in front of their ears, and with a white cap on with points that curl up toward the ear.

The people are extremely clean and clever. The sole occupation of the men is fishing, while the women and girls do much lace work and knitting, but few of them ever leave the island and they seem contented and happy. They are all followers of Calvin and they attend church in the same old edifice in which he used to preach. They have two schools, one of which is a bible school. From here we went to Volendam.

Volendam. This town has nearly 3,000 people who are also fishermen, and have a large cannery, and every day one will see hundreds of their fishing smack in the cove near the town. Their gaily colored houses, with their peculiar costumes and manners are intensely interesting.

Edam has a population of 3,000 and they have some very picturesque old houses. Here is established large dryers and smokers, and the herring are sent there for that purpose from many places. They have a fifteenth century church that has considerable interest. Edam is famous for its cheese making, and while here we visited one of the factories. Here they keep their cows, their feed, make the cheese, and themselves reside all under one roof, and everything is neat and clean, and in a perfectly sanitary condition. In the summer time, however, the milking is done in the pastures, near a canal and the milk taken in boats to the factory. At Monikondam, another quaint old place, with its many Dutch peculiarities, we went on board a canal boat, and for twenty miles or more passed through a land of green pastures with thousands of head of the fine Holstein cattle and saw the old Dutch windmills pumping water from the drain ditches and running it into the canals, which are in many places two and twenty feet higher than the pasture land on each side of it.

Winning the Glidden Tour Absolute Proof of Maxwell Reliability

Maxwell won the Glidden Tour from New York to Jacksonville, Florida, under the worst road conditions on record--a 1454-mile journey through mud and sand, over swollen streams and storm-racked mountains--the hardest test to which motor cars have ever been subjected.

Of the 64 competitors, including cars priced up to $6000, the Maxwell cars were the only team to finish with a perfect score, and secured the Glidden trophy.

Another Maxwell entered by Gov. Hoke Smith also finished with a perfect score, and won the Anderson trophy offered for the best individual car showing--making the Maxwell triumph a clean sweep.

In spite of conditions, these Maxwells, noon and night, reached every control exactly on time and showed 100 per cent efficiency at all times.

This remarkable demonstration of Maxwell reliability was no surprise to the 47,000 owners of Maxwell cars. Maxwell dependability has been demonstrated to them by years of consistent daily service.

The 36 hp. MAXWELL

$1480 f. o. b. Factory, including Self-Starter

Special, $1480
Is 1912's "Undisputed Leader"

We predicted that when we announced the car. The Glidden tour proves it. The big, stylish, beautiful 36-hp. five-passenger touring car is unequalled by any car within $300 of its price.

We want you to see this car--note its ventilated fore-door, flush side, vestibuled steel body, inside control, Columbia Honeycomb Type Radiator and new designed bonnet--an aristocrat in appearance. The explanation of the remarkable price--$1480--is found in the great manufacturing and distributing economies of the United States Motor Co.

We also invite you to inspect the other 1912 Maxwell models, all embodying the famous Maxwell characteristics of Reliability, Durability and Economy.

Send for the story of the Glidden Tour and other valuable and interesting literature containing information every man should have who is thinking of buying an automobile. They are free--just say "send books."
