

UPPER VALLEY NEWS IRRIGATING CO. ELECTS OFFICERS

The Middle Fork Irrigating Company held its annual meeting in McIsaac's Hall, Parkdale, last Saturday and elected Ward Ireland Cornell, Douglas Gordon, Chester Walton, C. T. Rawson and Frank L. Keating, directors. The newly-elected directors organized and elected the following officers to serve for the ensuing year: Ward L. Cornell, president; C. T. Rawson, vice-president; Douglas Gordon, secretary and treasurer; Chester Walton, Manager.

ARMED TO TEETH HUNTERS HIT TRAIL

A hunting party led by Chet Walton and composed of John Cooper, Morris Walton, Orville Thompson and Alex J. Keating, Jr., started last Sunday evening on an expedition in quest of big game. Walton resembled an arsenal on the Mexican border—a brace of revolvers, a Winchester and 300 rounds of ammunition in his belt. Orville Thompson looked business-like with a repeater over his shoulder and a bowie knife between his teeth. John Cooper was dressed to kill—a red shirt and an axe, while Morris Walton and Keating brought up the rear armed with flint-lock, muzzle-loading 1776 models.

They soon struck a trail along the Lava Spring preserve which led to the turbulent Porteous stream across which they fearlessly forded, disregarding the many signs of warning posted. Upon their return they reported that game was plentiful but their peep sights failed to work and in consequence thereof they were able only to bag a grey digger and a chipmunk.

MCINTOSH NOT PRESENT BUT BETTER MAN'S THERE

While O. M. Boe, accompanied by C. E. McIntosh, was journeying to Parkdale over the picturesque Mt. Hood Railroad recently he had occasion to leave the train for a few moments at the town of Dee, and upon returning to the train he entered the wrong coach. Not seeing his friend he called out "Is McIntosh in here?" "No," responded a voice from the rear of the car, "but there's a McGregor and he can lick a McIntosh any day."

ENTERTAINMENT COURSE GETS GENEROUS SUPPORT

Being of Yankee descent he wired some tallow candles, which his old-fashioned host provided, to his lamps and made the trip to town without fear of the law.

Roe Gates narrowly escaped death one day last week. He climbed into a pine tree near the schoolhouse and grasped a live wire. He was severely shocked and thrown to the ground. His hand was badly burned and other injuries were sustained, but none serious. Mr. and Mrs. Gates lost a child last year by a sudden death.

MANY FROM HERE ATTEND THE O. A. C.

As the general exodus for schools and colleges begins the increased number from Hood River who are planning to attend the O. A. C. is most noticeable.

Old students are returning with a renewed interest to assume the responsibilities of upper classmen. Ray Nickelsen, Carl Berry and Floyd Nummamer are returning to take up Sophomore work in agriculture. Roberta Friday and Elythe Brunquist will continue their work in domestic science. Mary Erwin and Joy Mason will enter on junior work in Commerce. Robert Shinn, after an absence of two years, will re-enter as a junior in Agriculture. Freeman Mason, who has spent his summer in the valley will return to begin his work as an associate editor on "The Orange," the Junior's annual book.

The new students who will enter the agricultural course are Waldo Arens, Almont Ferguson, Culvert Page, Harry Coshaw and Forest Moe. Earl Franz will take up work in business management in the commercial course. Gladys Clark, Addis Freeman and Helen Cox will register in domestic science.

In the last two years many new buildings have been erected at a great cost to the state, and with the many new instructors added to the faculty one of the fullest and most successful years that O. A. C. has ever enjoyed is predicted.

The green campus and the many new improvements will make for the returning students a happy welcome and to the "Rocks" it will soon become as dear as to the graduates.

Measuring Nature.

Nature is not benevolent. Nature is just, gives pound for pound, measure for measure, makes no exceptions, never tempers her decrees with mercy or winks at any infringement of her laws. And in the end is not this best? Could the universe be run as a charity or a benevolent institution or as a poorhouse of the most approved pattern? Without this merciless justice this irrefragable law, where would we have brought up long ago? It is a hard gospel, but rocks are hard, too, yet they form the foundations of the hills. Man introduces benevolence, mercy, altruism, into the world, and he pays the price in his added burdens, and he reaps his reward in the vast social and civic organizations that were impossible without these things.—John Burroughs in Century.

THE OFFICIAL RECIPE.

We have heard a good deal in days gone by about Boston baked beans, and a good many of us have had beans from cans bearing this label that were as hard and tasteless as bullets. Apparently for the purpose of rectifying some of these wrong impressions May or Fitzgerald of the "bean city" has recently given out the official recipe for Boston baked beans. Perhaps some of the good wives and mothers who read this department will be interested in fixing a batch as per directions for the purpose of determining whether they are "as good as mother used to make." It may be bad manners to make the suggestion, but the writer is inclined to believe that the beans would better be left in that second water instead of pouring it off just after the skins burst. However, the official formula is as follows: Pick one quart of beans, cover with cold water and let soak over night. In the morning drain, cover with fresh water, heat slowly and cook on back of range until skins burst. Then drain water off. Scald three-fourths of a pound of fat pork, place in beans, then mix one tablespoonful each of salt, molasses, sugar and one teaspoonful of mustard. Mix in a quart of boiling water and add to beans. Bake slowly from six to eight hours. Uncover during last hour and add water as needed.

A REMINISCENCE.

The writer had an experience with a balky horse a couple of years ago that he is able to appreciate the value of in retrospect in fuller measure than at the time the broncho was acting up. Usually there was a spell each morning that had to be eased off a bit by letting the team trot twenty or thirty rods hooked to the riding cultivator. And even after this spin the pressure had to be put on gradually, first one set of shovels being let down, then the other. Usually things would go all right after this preliminary, but it makes the writer smile to think of the amusement furnished the neighbors by the mutual spin across the ranch. This team—both were more or less inclined to contrariness—could not be surpassed on the road, would blink an automobile off the highway and would not break a lively trot for miles. But they went into other hands, and some fellow—pity on him!—is trying to work 'em and maintain his church standing. Speaking from experience, we are inclined to think he has a job of considerable size on his hands.

A GOOD FALL FEED.

Unless the price of beef cattle should slump sharply from present high levels—and the word of those well posted on the cattle situation is to the effect they will not—the coming months would seem to be particularly favorable for feeding cattle for a future market. Not only are unheard of prices being paid for the best grades of steers on central markets, but feeders, while higher than usual, can be bought in this flesh for about $5.50. The two factors mentioned, coupled with a bumper corn crop which will likely give a price of between 40 and 45 cents a bushel, would seem to make the prospect excellent for realizing a good return on the money invested in the enterprise in the shape of feeders and feed.

PLOW EARLY.

There is no sure way of getting entirely rid of worm and insect pests, but it is well for the husbandman to remember that plowing his fields as soon as possible after the grain or other crop is removed tends to break up the nests and thus expose to birds and other enemies, as well as to the elements, all worms and insects that seek a fall and winter shelter in the surface soil. This fact was commented upon in these notes some weeks ago, but it is worth repeating.

The Bread We Offer

is a boon to women worried with home baking. It is delicious in flavor, as wholesome as the best materials and sanitary methods can make it and of full weight. Try a loaf or two and you'll realize the foolishness and extravagance of doing your own baking.

DRUGS

After the Doctor--

THE DRUGGIST

The doctor's work is only half what has to be done for the patient. And if the druggist be lacking in ability and care the prescription might as well have never been written. But we make a special study of each case and our own medical knowledge is thorough enough to be of great use to us in those sometimes occurring cases when the doctor, in his haste, makes a slight error.
