HORSES WINTERED

DON'T send your team to eastern Oregon to winter and get a skeleton back that isn't fit to handle your spring work. Keep it here in the valley where you can see it at any time and see what good shape it is in. It will not cost you much more.

We have just put up some of the finest grain, timothy and alfalfa hay in the Upper Valley. We have a big stock barn and are prepared to care for a number of teams during the winter. We are making up our list now. If you want your team well cared for this winter, you had better write or 'phone for terms at once

CONTROL OF SCAB FULLY EXPLAINED

Apple scab is caused by a fungus which passes through two distinct stages during the year. The fungus passes the winter in the dead and decaying apple leaves. Small, round bodies are formed in the leaves, inside of which the winter spores are formed. These spores are mature and are distributed about the time the leaves begin to unfold and later. Spores lodging on the leaves, flowers and young fruit start the infections which are commonly known as apple scab or fungus. New infections take place from the young spots first formed, and if conditions are favorable the amount of injury done during the season is considerable on some varieties, some being more susceptible to the disease than others.

To control scab it is necessary to do very careful work, since the way in which the fungus develops and the length of time infection takes place gives a comparatively short time to apply the sprays necessary to keep the disease in check. The destruction of the diseased leaves is a very good practice, but it is not entirely satisfactory, since all of the leaves cannot be destroyed. Spraying during the fall to destroy the leaves and to protect the plants during the spring usually gives results. The method of spraying and the sprays used that give the best results are as follows:

1. A thorough spraying of the leaves following the picking of the fruit and before the dropping of the leaves should be made in Autumn. Bordeaux mixture (6 4 50) should be used for this application. This and the first spraying for anthracnose come at the same time, so the fall spraying is doubly important.

2. As the terminal buds in the flower clusters are opening, an application of 4 4 50 Bordeaux should be made. Lime-sulphur 1 32 may be substituted if the grower so desires.

3. At the time the majority of the petals have fallen it is timely to make a third application of lime-sulphur 1 32, since at this time Bordeaux is apt to russet the fruit.

4. A fourth spraying is sometimes done at the time the fruit becomes smooth, or soon thereafter, but this application has not been entirely satisfactory, owing to a russetting of the fruit.

One of the most important of these sprayings is the Fall application, and should be made in all places where the infection has been severe this year.

OBITUARY

WILLIAM R. STARRETT
A host of friends were shocked to learn of the death of William Romaine Starrett, which occurred Thursday evening following an operation performed earlier in the week. Mr. Starrett was one of the best known and most highly respected orchardists in the valley and his death will be felt keenly.

The illness which resulted in Mr. Starrett's death was of only a few days' duration. Acute intestinal trouble made an operation imperative. A surgeon from Portland was summoned. It was found, however, that complications had set in and little hope was entertained that Mr. Starrett would be able to rally from the severe shock. The operation was performed Monday evening and he sank until Thursday when death came.

Mr. Starrett was born in New York City 45 years ago last January. He engaged in the coal business and through his industry and faithfulness worked himself up to the position of manager for the Oilphant Coal Company in New York City. This position he filled for several years until his health became impaired and he came West. It was in 1910 that Mr. and Mrs. Starrett came to Hood River and purchased an orchard on the East Side. He applied the same principles to fruit growing that had made him successful in the business world and was one of the successful ranchers of the valley. He was a man who, on account of his many estimable qualities, made friends readily and to many in the valley news of his death brought a deep sense of personal loss.

The remains were taken to Jersey City and Mrs. Starrett accompanied them Friday. A number of friends were at the station to extend their sympathy and to do all in their power to comfort Mrs. Starrett in her great bereavement. She expects to be gone about a month, after which she will return to Hood River to live.

Big Grain Shipments

Grain is now moving in immense quantities, trainloads of it passing through Hood River every day from the harvest fields of Eastern Oregon to Portland.

The Hood River Apple Vinegar Co. is receiving elder and vinegar apples, consisting of early varieties and windfalls of later varieties.

Extra Fine Celery Grown

A. Osburn, who has a 20-acre place in the Barrett district where the old Dr. Barrett home site stood, has brought in some very fine samples of celery, dry onions and potatoes. This celery has been examined by experts and pronounced as fine as can be grown anywhere. It is of high flavor and there is no waste. Within a few days the Hood River stores will be supplied with this local celery.

LOCAL ORCHARDISTS FIGURE IN STRIKE

Louis Schell, ex-superintendent of Elbert Hubbard's Roycroft shops, owner of a ranch here and employed as a printer in Portland, is placed in peculiar position as the result of the labor troubles there. He is arrayed in the strike against his son, under whom he was employed. The situation is described by the Oregonian as follows:

Industrial disturbances have brought forth many strange facts, but an incident that is probably without parallel has developed in connection with the strike of the Portland job printers and pressmen. Strikers and employers are witnessing, for the first time, it is said, the spectacle of father arrayed against son.

A. A. Schell, head of the Chapman Advertising Company, is the employer and son, Louis Schell, ex-superintendent of Elbert Hubbard's Roycroft shops, ranch owner of Hood River and pressman, is the striker and father.

Each is fighting for a principle. The son believes in the rule of the open shop, while the father is loyal to the union cause.

When the union mandate was issued for a walkout, Mr. Schell, Sr., was given the choice of arraying himself against his son or renouncing the union card he had carried for more than a quarter of a century. He walked out of his son's shop with his fellow workmen.

Utmost friendly relations exist between them. Each, however, is positive he is fighting for the right.
